INTRODUCTION.

THE Library, of which a Catalogue is now made public, was first brought to the notice of European scholars by H.S.H. Count Noer, Prince Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein, who brought an account of it to the late Professor Goldstücker. But its full importance was not known till I was deputed, in March, 1871, to examine it by the then Governor of Madras—Lord Napier and Ettrick, whose scholarly and lively interest in the past of India will always render his name a cherished souvenir in the minds of those who appreciate research. Not a moment too soon did he intervene; what has been saved of the past in South India is entirely due to him, and it will require very minute search to add anything to the comprehensive plan of the work which he devised and set on foot in South India.

When I came to examine the Tanjore Library, I found it to be, though with huge masses of rubbish properly buried in it, of far greater importance than was suspected, and I suggested a tolerably complete Catalogue, instead of a brief and partial report. To this, Lord Napier at once assented. I was at Tanjore for nearly eleven months, and in this time I drew up the slips for the 12,376 MSS. in the Library as roughly classified, and I also sorted them roughly to begin the work of drawing up the Catalogue. I was then required to go to a distance of some hundreds of miles to take up very heavy routine work. This impeded sadly my progress, and I had often to rely for necessary information on correspondence. In 1874, I got back to Tanjore, but my official duties continued so heavy, that I could do but little, and it was only when I was enabled to devote three months to this work alone at the end of 1878 and the beginning of 1879, that I could finally complete this Catalogue. But for these numerous and serious obstacles to my progress, the work would have been done long ago.

The MSS. described here are the result of perhaps 300 years' collections; firstly, by the Nāyaks of Tanjore; secondly, after about 1675, by the Mahraṭha Princes. The MSS. are of very different value, and come from very different sources. Some of the palm-leaf MSS. belong to the earlier period; but the greater part were collected in the last and present centuries. All the Nāgarī MSS. belong to the Mahraṭha times, and a large number of these were collected at Benares by the Rājā Serfojee (Çarabhoji) about fifty years ago. The rest are recent Nāgarī copies of MSS. in South Indian characters, and, as a rule, are very badly made; a large staff of copyists was formerly entertained, but more was thought of providing employment for indigent Brahmans, than of securing the services of as an Introduction to this Catalogue, will supply all necessary information respecting the numerous characters used for writing Sanskrit in South India, and their modifications.

All the MSS. are now secured in cabinets, and as they are numbered consecutively no difficulty can be experienced in finding any particular one. It is to be hoped also that, for the future, they will be safe from thieves. The collection has, no doubt, suffered much in this way. In 1871 I saw some 500 MSS. which had been attached in a Civil suit; these had, evidently, once formed part of the Palace Library, and among these were some books of importance. Other MSS. in the handwriting of Palace copyists, but in the possession of private individuals, have since come under my notice. Others had been borrowed, but never were returned; I have been able to get a few such recovered (Nos. 12,285, to 12,376).

My object in the following pages has been to show what materials for Sanskrit studies this Library affords. As regards the more important MSS., I have given a tolerably full description with extracts; these extracts are intended to show the state of the texts; so they have not, as a rule, been edited or corrected. In some cases, these extracts have had to be made for me, and in such cases I cannot answer that they absolutely represent the original; but, at all events, they will not vary much. One important fact will, at once, be evident from this Catalogue—the great part taken, during later times, in S. India in the development of Sanskrit Literature. More has been done, in this way, during the past thousand years in the South than in the North.

I have added a few bibliographical notes, for which I have had to rely on my own library; these have often been increased by Dr. R. Rost, who read the proofs in England. To him, also, the reader owes the copious and valuable Indexes. As the printing began in 1876, I have had to add the more important works recently published in the "Addenda et Errata." Prof. A. Weber's invaluable "History of Indian Literature" will supply what is wanting here.

In conclusion, I can only express a hope that the very unfavourable circumstances under which this book has been brought out will not be found to have seriously affected its correctness. Such as it is, the work is mine in every way, and owes nothing to others, except what has been done by Dr. Rost, but this part is of the greatest value and importance.

2.—WORKS RELATING TO THE TEXT OF THE RIG VEDA.

III.—a. प्रातिशाख्यम् Çaunaka's Prātiçākhya. This has been edited with a German translation by Dr. Max Müller, and with a French translation by M. Regnier.

(2,423) D. ff. 5. A fragment. (P. i. and ii.—10.)

IV.—aa. Pārshadavyākhyā. A commentary on the R. V. Prātiçākhya by Uaṭa-(Uvaṭa)-Bhaṭṭa, son of Vajraṭa, and an inhabitant of Ānandapura (Benares?). In 18 paṭalas. The introduction has been given by Prof. Roth in his Zur Literatur und Geschichte des Weda, 1846; it attributes the work to Vishṇumitra, son of Vedamitra, but the colophon assigns it to Ūvaṭa, who is also known as a commentator on the White Yajur Veda.[1] This C. is not the oldest; Prof. Eggeling (v. Preface to Dr. Max Müller's Ṛigvedaprātiçākhya) has discovered one which is certainly more ancient than Ūvaṭa's work.

(2,417) D. ff. 239. Recent.

(2,418) D. ff. 223 (small). 12 paṭalas (or to the end of a ii.) only, and wants the introduction.

(2,419) D. 15 small ff. containing the commencement only (2 vargas).

V.—b. उपलेख: Upalekha. Edited by Dr. Pertsch. Treats of the Kramapāṭha.

(2,402) D. ff. 8.

VI.—Upalekhabhāshya, anon., recent, 300 granthas.

VII.—c. सर्वानुक्रमणी Sarvānukramaṇī, attributed to Kātyāyana. This work contains first: 12 sections of Paribhāshāḥ which begin:

"Atha ṛigvedāmnāye çākalake sūktapratīka-ṛiksaṅkhyā-ṛishi-daivata-chandāmsy anukramishyāmo. Yathopadeçam. Na hy etajjñānam ṛite çrautasmārtakarmaprasiddhir. These sections end: "iti paribhāshā samāptā." Next follows the text in 8 ashṭakas or 64 sections, beginning: "Agniṃ nava madhucchandā vaiçvāmitro vāyo vaiyavyaindravāyavamaitrāvaruṇās tricā."

These sections end: "tṛitīyā tṛishṭup (8)." About 570 granthas.[2]

(2,399) D. ff. 78. 8 lines to a page. Written about 1750. Paribhāshā f. 1. Text f. 8.

(2,400) D. ff. 22. The text only, breaking off in § 40. Recent.

(2,401) D. ff. 4. The text, beginning only.

(2,404) D. ff. 5. Paribhāshāḥ only.

(8,981) Te. ll. 23. Recent, but worm-eaten. Not very legible. Contains the 64 sections of text ll. 1—19, b; then follow 12 sections Paribhāshāḥ. Begin: "Athā 'nuvākā agnim īḷe purohitam." End: "iti dvādaçakhaṇḍikāparibhāshāṭ(ḥ) pravarṇitā ata ūrdhvaṃ catu(ḥ)shashṭikhaṇḍikā tu pravarṇyate."

VIII.—cc. Sarvānukramaṇīṭīkā. The author's name does not appear.

(2,405) D. ff. 26. Recent. gr. 367. Begins:

"Caturmukhamukhāmbhojavanahaṃsavadhūr mama |

Sacarācaramunimānye caturānanavadanavanahaṃsi |
Mama hṛidayakamalakoṭaragatavacaneshu vasa vāgdevi! | 2 |"

The introduction contains 9 similar çlokas; then begins the C.: "Atha ṛigvedāmnāye 'ti (°ya iti) tatra 'yam athaçabda ānantaryamaṅgalādikeshv artheshu drashṭavyo 'rthatrayasambhavāt. This fragment contains the C. on the Paribhāshāḥ, 12 sections.

There is another C. by Shaḍguruçishya which is called Vedārthadīpikā.[1] It is a work of great interest, but MSS. are very rare.

IX.—d. वैदृंख्या Baitsaṅkhyā.

Anukramaṇīs to the Ṛig, Sāma, and Yajur Vedas in which the numbers are expressed by letters certainly exist,[2] but they cannot be very old. XIV.—gg. Niruktavṛitti by Durgācārya of Jambumārgāçrama,[2] in 18 (really 12) adhyāyas, gr. 15,050.

A C. on the Nirukta of Yāska, and thus a continuation of the last.

(2,379) D. begins:

"Āditaḥ pāṇinī(yaṃ) tu çīxā jyotis tataç chandaḥ |

In this MS. there is great confusion in the numbering of the chapters. The first chapter, which is divided into 6 pādas, is erroneously numbered as a 1—6—ff. 99. Recent.

a 2 (in the MS. 7) ff. 35.
a 4 (——— 9) ff. 36. 10 is numbered twice.
a 6 (——— 11) ff. 51. Written Saṃv. 1820.
a 11 (in the MS. 16) ff. 19. a 12 (—17, 18) ff. 22. Except a 1, this MS. belongs to the latter half of the 18th century. The ff. of the original from which it was copied appear (in one or two places) to have been in disorder. It is a bad transcript of a good original MS.

XV.—h. A short treatise on Ṛ. V. accentuation, with examples, resembling the 'laxaṇa' tracts which belong to the Black Y. V.

XVIII.—l. जटोदाहरणम् Jaṭodāharaṇa. Author's name not mentioned. Examples of the effect of rules of Sandhi in forming the jaṭā text of the Ṛ. V.

(2,539) D. 8 ff. worn. C. on Çrīsūkta ('Hiraṇyakarṇam,' etc. i., 122, 14).

(8,980) Te. 146 ll. 69—71 left blank. A few lacunae. Ashṭaka viii., to 6, 2. Written about 1750. The first and last ll. are slightly injured.

As far as I have been able to examine these MSS., they all belong to the defective classes described by Prof. Max Müller.

XXIII.—Ṛigartharatnamālā. The author's name is not mentioned. The above name (as given in the text) appears to be preferable to the title Gūḍhārtharatnamālā, which is on the outer leaf.

(8,979) Te. 44 ll. 6—10 lines on a side. Written in a small and illegible hand. The first 5 ll. have the right ends broken off, and the MS. (though certainly recent) is much worm-eaten. Contains Ashṭaka i., Adhyāya 1, and a few lines at the beginning of a 2 (begins l. 43). The beginning is as follows: "Iha khalu saṃsārapārāvārapāraṃ j(i)gamishatāṃ mumuxūṇām arthanīyasya bhagavatprasādasya tajjñānam antareṇā 'sambhavāt tajjñānārthaṃ pravṛittā api Vedā apravṛittivipratī . . .? . . . tatas teshām bhagavatparatvaprakārapradarçanārthaṃ sajjanānujighṛixur bhagavān Anartamuniḥ[1] kāsāṃcid ṛicāṃ bhāshyam acīklṛipat: tad bhāshyam apy atigahanārthatvān mandais sukhena jñātuṃ na çakyata iti para . . ." etc. As the author considers the Ṛ. V. to teach Nārāyaṇa to be the Supreme Being, this C. cannot be old.

The C. on the text begins l. 2. It is very concise. The MS. is in such bad order, that it is not possible to give a specimen of it; almost every line being injured.

On l. 16 Sarvajñaçikhāmaṇi-Bhāshyakṛit is quoted.

II.—Brāhmaṇas, etc., of the Ṛig Veda.[2]

XXIV.—ऐतरेयब्राह्मणम् Aitareyabrāhmaṇa. Edited and translated by Dr. Haug, 2 vols., Bombay, 1863. The 1st section with a translation is also given in A. S. L. pp. 390—405, v. also I. S. ii. s. 111—123 (Die Sage von Çunaḥçepha, von R. Roth) and Streiter, 'De Çunaḥçepo dissertatio.'

(2,371) D. ff. 53, 57, 65, 61, 58, 58, 59, and 34. This copy is made up of fragments of different MSS. The last section is much worn.

(2,372) D. ff. 30, 41, 43, 1, 7, 10—13, 15, 16, 19—22, 24, 26, 27, 30, 45, 36, 18, and 24 (wants end).

(2,373) D. ff. 35, 40, 45, 32, 81, 32, 50 (imperfect), and 10 (wants end). This is made up of fragments from several MSS.

(2,374) D. ff. 78. Pañcikā 3.

(2,375) D. ff. 55. P. 3—kh. 50. Wants conclusion. Worn.

(2,376) D. ff. 14 and f. 21. P. 6, a 1—4. Very defective.

(2,377) D. ff. 38. P. 7—to kh. 29.

(8,970) Te. 109 ll. Written about the end of the 18th century. A few lacunae and f. 80 is injured.

P. 1—1, 2—15, 3—20, 4—47, 5—59, 6—76, 7—88, b, 8—100.

(8,971) Gr. 184 ll. Written about 1750. Much worm-eaten.

(8,972) Gr. ll. 2—77. P. iii., 4 (end)—vi., 2 (imperfect).

XXV.—Aitareyabrāhmaṇabhāshya by Sāyaṇa. About 16,300gr.

(2,378) D. ff. 68, 63, 101, 57, 67, 57, 67, and 46; the pages in each pañcikā being numbered from the beginning of the section. A recent (c. 1825) but fairly correct N. Indian MS. Begins:

"Vāgīçādyāḥ, etc. . . . vedārthaṃ vaktum udyataḥ (4). Nanu ko 'yaṃ vedo nāma? ke vā tasya vishayaprayojanasambandhādhikāriṇaḥ? kathaṃ vā tasya prāmāṇyam? iha khalu etasmin sarvasminn asati vedo 'vyākhyānayogyo bhavati. Atro 'cyate: ishṭaprāptyanishṭaparihārayor alaukikam upāyaṃ yo grantho vedayati sa vedaḥ," etc.

The legend invented to account for the name Aitareya[1] is given as follows:—"Pravṛittasya tu brāhmaṇasyai 'tarayakatve saṃpradāyavida etām ākhyāyikām ācaxate: kasyacit khalu maharsher bahvyaḥ patnyo vidyante, tāsāṃ madhye kasyāçcid itare 'ti nāmadheyam; itarāyāḥ putro mahidāsākhyaḥ kumāraḥ; etac cā 'raṇyakāṇḍe samāmnāyate: "etad dha sma vai 'tad vidvān mahi(d)āsa aitareyaḥ;" tadīyasya tu pitur bhāryāntaraputreshu eva snehātiçayaḥ, na tu mahidāse. Tataḥ kasyāṃcid yajñasabhāyāṃ taṃ mahidāsam avajñāyā 'nyān putrān svotsaṅge sthāpayām āsa: tadānīṃ khinnavadanaṃ mahidāsam avagatye 'tarākhyā tanmātā svakīyakuladevatāṃ bhūmim anusasmāra; sā ca bhūmir devatā divyamūrttidharā satī, yajñasabhāyāṃ samāgatya mahidāsāya divyaṃ siṃhāsanaṃ datvā, tatrai' nam upaveçya, sarveshv api kumāreshu pāṇḍityādhikyam avagamayyai' tad brāhmaṇapratibhāsanarūpaṃ varaṃ dadau. XXVI.—ऐतरेयारण्यकम् Aitareyāraṇyaka; 5 Āraṇyakas. Ā. I. contains adhyāyas 5; ii—a 7; iii—a 2; iv—a 1; v—a 3. There is a C. on this by Sāyaṇa. A Gr. MS. of the beginning of it is in the Library of R. Asiatic Society of London. Çankara has commented ii. and iii. (Aitareyopanishad). An edition of the text and C. has been commenced in the Bibliotheca Indica, with the aid of transcripts of some of these MSS.

(6,450) D. ff. 32. Recent.

(8,972) Te. ll. 32, 4—6 lines on a side. Written about 1780. Much injured. Begins:

'Agna ilā' nama ṛishibhyo mantrakṛitibhyo mantrapatibhyo namo vo astu. Very incorrectly and carelessly copied. Ends abruptly.

(8,974) Gr. ll. 86. Written about 1720.

[1] MS. Ānarthamuni (!). It appears from Verzeichniss, p. 27 (No. 106), that one Varadattasuta Ānartīya commented the Çāṅkhāyanaçrautasūtra, and this is probably the writer here alluded to. It seems to me not unlikely that this MS. (described above) is a fragment of Mahīdhara's C. on the Rigveda ("Catalogue of Sanskrit MSS. existing in Oudh," pp. 2, 3 of Fasc. i.). There is no other Commentary (except perhaps Ātmānanda's, which is in the I. O. Library) that I can suggest. I have, however, not seen either.

[2] The Upanishads which form parts of Brāhmaṇas and Āraṇyakas are described with the other Upanishads.

[1] Vide the remarks of Dr. Max Müller in A. S. L., pp. 336–7.

III.—Ṛigvidhāna.

XXVII.—ऋग्विधानम् (ज्येष्ठं) Ṛigvidhāna (Jyeshṭha) 2 adhyāyas, on tapas, and prāyaçcitta.

(355) D. ff. 37. 8 lines to a page. Written Saṃv. 1722.

XXVIII.—ऋग्विधानम् (कनिष्ठं) Ṛigvidhāna (Kanishṭha).

(357) D. ff. 35. 11 lines to a page. Written about 1750. Begins: "Svayaṃbhuve brahmaṇe viçvagoptre namas kṛi (sic!) cāṃ mantradṛigbhyas tathai 'va | vivaxur asmy ṛigvidhānaṃ purāṇaṃ purā dṛishṭam ṛishibhir mantradṛigbhiḥ." Four adhyāyas in çlokas. Use of ṛic verses repeated many times to obtain desired objects.

Regarding these two tracts see "Verzeichniss," pp. 31—2.

(9,048) Gr. ll. 17. Recent, k. iii. 3, 1—6.

(9,121) Gr. extracts from the B. Y. V.

As the Grantha character is little suited to the extreme nicety of Vedic spelling, these MSS. will give no aid in that respect to editors; but it is likely that they may furnish an authentic v. l. here and there.

XXX.—B. Padapāṭha.

(2,476) D. ff. 64, 71, 43, 59, 80, 69, 59. Not accented. Written Saṃv. 1754.

Pada texts of the B. Y. V. are not uncommon in Southern India, though there is not a single specimen written on ōlais in this library.

2.—Works relating to the Text of the Kṛishṇa Yajur Veda.

XXXI.—a. तैत्तिरीयप्रातिशाख्यम् Taittirīyaprātiçākhya. This has been edited and translated by Professor Whitney (in the Journal of the American Oriental Society), in the most perfect manner; it has also been reprinted in the B. I.

(9,076) b. Te. ll. 100—108. An old and good MS., written about 1650; but as it is not inked, it is difficult to read.

(9,074) J. Gr. 24. First 2 ll. much injured.

XXXII.—aa. Tribhāshyaratna, a C. on the Taittirīya prātiçākhya.

(9,076) a. Te. ll. 99. See the remark regarding the last MS. but one. Pr. ii. begins C. 69.

(9,077) Gr. ll. 70. Contains as far as pr. 1, adhyāya 8, only. Written about 1750. Not inked.

XXXIV.—c. विलंख्यलक्षणम् (?) Vilaṅkhyalaxaṇa (?) by Nārāyaṇa.

(9,074) b. Gr. ll. 4, b—9. The text explains the meaning of Vilaṅkhya (in some MSS. Vilaṅghya) as—

Tadantāni vilaṅkhyāny ucyante vidvattamaiḥ ‖"

XXXV.—d. नपरतपरलक्षणम् Naparataparalaxaṇa.

XXXVI.—e. अवर्णिलक्षणम् Avarṇilaxaṇa.

XXXVII.—ee. Avarṇivyākhyāna. Anon.

(9,075) a. Gr. ll. 3—22. An old MS. (about 1600), and much broken.

XXXVIII.—f. अनिंग्यलक्षणम् Aniṅgyalaxaṇa. According to the next work, Aniṅgya means bhāgapadam (Aniṅgyam ity api bhāgapadam ucyate na tv asamāsapadam; saty api samāsatve çacīpatir bṛihaspatir ityādīnām aniṅgyatvāt). Cf. Prof. Whitney's remarks (Taitt. Prātiçākhya, i. 48, p. 36).

(9,074) d. Gr. ll. 19—30.

XXXIX.—ff. Aniṅgyavyākhyāna. Anon.

(9,075) b. Gr. ll. 23—77 (?). Greatly injured.

These tracts are intended to assist learners of the Krama and Jaṭā, etc., pāṭha, and give lists of words which in those texts are affected in certain ways. I have given the paribhāshā and first lines of these tracts already—v. Catalogue, pp. 10—12. The C. on the Çamānalaxaṇa explains Çamāna as Visarjanīya-lopino vaidikasya padasya pūrvācāryakṛitā saṃjñā. Iṅgya and Aniṅgya are also written īṅgya and anīṅgya. MSS. of the above tracts are in the India Office Library (in London).

Bhaṭṭa Bhāskaramiçra is quoted by Sāyaṇa, and according to tradition lived about 950—1000 A.D. He must not be confounded with Kāçyapa Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara, who wrote a Sāmavedārsheyadīpa, or Index (about 1,000 granthas) to the metres, rishis and deities of the Sāmaveda P. A., and who probably lived in the fourteenth century.[1] The quotations in this work, though meagre, are interesting. In the parts I have been able to examine, besides Bhavasvāmin, the Taittirīya Anukramaṇī, Mānava Dharmaçāstra and Pāṇini, Yāska k. i. 1, 13—regarding 'payaḥ' (N. ii. 5), pr. 2, 80—regarding 'atithi' (N. iv. 5) are cited. In k. ii. 1, 5, the opinion of Bharadvāja is quoted. In the same kāṇḍa, praçna iv. anuvāka 14, there is an interesting discussion on a passage cited from some work on astronomy —atra candraguṇakīrtanenā 'ditya eva stūyate . . . tathā hi 'sūryo' gnimayo golaç candro 'mbumayaḥ svacchaḥ | iti tasmād asya divasakaramarīcisamāçleshena bhāsvaratvaṃ bhavati: yathāhuḥ—

Çesham upasthitatvān no 'palabhyate. Sūryābhimukhaṃ bhāsvaram api . . . asmābhir upalabdhum ayogyatvāt. In pr. iv. the Vāyupurāṇa, several Upanishads, and also authors of Smṛitis are quoted (v. Z. d. D. M. G. xix. 154).

Towards the end this C. becomes a mere paraphrase with an occasional brief explanation of an unusual form or accent. At the end of the kāṇḍas in some MSS., it is stated that Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara 'Nishpāvake çāke'[2] composed this C.; this proves that he was a Telugu Brāhman, as they only take names of plants for their family names. His name was thus (re-translating the two words) Anumula Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara. This family name is still a common one.[3]

It is to be remarked that, according to the division of the B. Y. V. usual in Southern India, namely, Saṃhitā, Brāhmaṇa (more usually Çākhā or Parāyaṇa), Kāṭhaka and Āraṇyaka, all the MSS. in this collection of the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa and the CC. on it, end with A. iii., 9, the last three prapāṭhakas forming the Kāṭhaka which Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara treats as a separate work, but Sāyaṇa does not.

[1] CC. on the S. V. Brāhmaṇas are attributed to this author, but I have not seen them. This Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara quotes Bharatasvāmin.

XLVIII.—3. आरण्यकम् Āraṇyaka of the B. Y. V.

In course of publication in the B. I.; edited with the C. of Sāyaṇa by Bābu Rājendralāl Mitra.

Professor Weber (in I. S. i., pp. 76, 7) first called attention to a remark of Sāyaṇa about different recensions of the 10th chapter of this work, and of which he mentions three. Sāyaṇa has, however, neglected to mention that the recension which he calls Drāviḍa presents other differences also, and that although he follows this recension as regards the Yājñikyupanishad, which forms his 10th prapāṭhaka, he has deviated from it in the arrangement of the rest. In the Drāviḍa text the chapters are called praçna, and the first three agree with the corresponding prapāṭhaka of Sāyaṇa's text; the 4th praçna corresponds with Sāyaṇa's 6th prapāṭhaka, the 5th praçna with his prap. 7—9; the 6th praçna with his 10th prap., and the 7th and 8th praçna with his 4th and 5th prap. In this recension some of the introductory benedictions are omitted, and the divisions are sometimes different. Sāyaṇa has followed Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara in the general arrangement, and also in the number of sections in prap. 10th; but I cannot find in the older C. a single word about differences of recension. The (as regards arrangement) not very intelligible statements of the Taitt. Anukramaṇī seem to support the Drāviḍa text.[1]

(2,486) D. ff. 124. Recent and carefully written. Contains the N. (? Andhra) text; as the Yājñikyupanishad contains 80 sections.

(9,068) Gr. ll. 209. Recent and not inked. Though this MS. follows the arrangement of the Drāviḍa text, it is plain from Bhaṭṭa-Bhāskara's remarks at the beginning of the sections, that his work was arranged on the same plan, as Sāyaṇa's, and that, therefore, the change has been made to suit the recension current in S. India.

This MS. contains part of the Kāṇva text of the Çatapatha-Brāhmaṇa, which differs much from that published.[1] Except at the beginning and end, the text is in very fair order. But few Brahmans in S. India follow the White Y. V., and these are all originally from N. India, though some families have been settled near Madras and Madura for several centuries. The old enmity[2] between the followers of the two texts of the Yajur Veda has given rise to a curious fiction, namely, that followers of the White Y. V. cease to be Brahmans for a certain period at noon every day. This has no doubt arisen from the name Mādhyandina, which is that of the most common Çākhā of this Veda. This fiction has reduced the followers of the White Y. V. so low that other Brahmans will not associate with them. See Prof. Weber's remarks on this Brāhmaṇa ("Ind. Literaturgeschichte," pp. 129 ffg.).

These MSS. are all recent, and unfortunately far from correct. Nos. 2,410 to 2,413, 2,415 and 2,416 represent one text. No. 2,414 is much shorter and differs considerably from the other. I much regret that I am not able to give the collation with the text published by Dr. Weber, as the only copy accessible to me of the I. S. wants parts 2 and 3 of vol. iii. Both texts begin: Atha caraṇavyūhaṃ vyākhyāsyāmaḥ. Tatra yad uktaṃ cāturvaidyam. Catvāro vedā vijñātā bhavanti ṛigvedo yajurvedaḥ sāmavedo 'tharvavedaç ce 'ti. Tatra ṛigvedasyā 'shṭau bhedā bhavanti—carcāçrāvakaḥ carcakaḥ çravaṇīyapāṭhaḥ kramapāṭhaḥ kramajaṭaḥ kramaça aḥ kramarathaḥ kramadaṇḍaç ce 'ti. The lists of Çākhās, etc., are as follows: A = 2,410; B = 2,414.

I. Ṛ. V. A. Āçvalāyana, Sāṅkhyāyana, Çākala, Bāshkala, Maṇḍukeya. B. Çākala, Vāshkala, Āçvalāyana, Çāṅkhāyana, Māṇḍukāyana. B. omits nearly all the details of the numbers of vargas, etc.

II. Y. V. Black. A. Caraka, Āharaka, Kaṭha, Kapishṭhalakaṭha, Cārāyaṇīya, Vārtāntareya, Çvetāçvatara, Upamanya, Maitrāvarunīya. As the number is stated to be twelve, some are omitted by the transcriber.

B. 12: Caraka, Āhvaraka, Prāya, Kaṭha, Kapishṭhalakaṭha, Cārāyaṇīya, Vārtāntavīya, Çvetāçvatara, Apamanyu, Pāta, Aiṇḍineya, Maitrāyaṇīya.

The last is divided by A. into seven sub-divisions: Mānava, Dundubha, Caikeya, Vārāha, Hāridraveya, Çyāma, Çyāmāyanīya.

And by B. into six: Mānava, Vārāha, Dundubha, Chāgaleya, Hāridravīya, Çāmayanīya.

White Yajur Veda.

A. Jābāla, Baudhaya, Kaṇva, Mādhyandina, . . . vīya, Sthāpaṇīya, Kāpāla, Pauḍaravatsa, Āvaṭika, Paramāvaṭika, Pārāçareya, Vaidyeya, Vaineya, Audheya, Gālava, Vaijaya, Kātyāyanīya.

B. 15. Jābālā, Baudhayana, Kāṇva, Mādhyandina, Çāpheya, Tāpanīya, Kapota, Pauṇḍaravaçya, Āvaḍika, Paramāvaṭika, Pārāçara, Vaineya, Vaidheya, Aḍḍhabaudheya.

B. divides the Kaṭhas into Prācya, Udīcya, and Nirṛitya. In A. this is omitted.

The pariçishṭas are according to A. Upajyotisha, Sāṅgalaxaṇa; Pratijñānuvākya, Parisaṅkhyāta Caraṇavyūha, Çrāddhakalpa, Pravarādhyāya.

According to B. 18: Yūpalaxaṇa, Chāgalaxaṇa, Pratijñānuvākya, Saṅkhyā, Caraṇavyūha, Çrāddhakalpa, Çulvikāni, Pārshada, Ṛigyajūṃshi, Ishṭakāpūraṇa, Pravarādhyāya, Ukthaçāstra, Kratusaṅkhyā, Nigama, Yajñapārçva, Povika (?), Prasavotthāna, Kūrmalaxaṇa.

III. Sāmaveda. A. Asurayaṇīya, Vārtāntareya, Prāñjali, Ṛigvarṇa, Prācīnayogya, Jñānayogya, Rāṇāyanīya. The last divided into Rāṇāyanīya, Sāṅkhyāyanīya, Saptamuydla, Khalyala, Mahākhalyala, Lāṅgala, Kanthuma, Gautama, Jaiminīya.

B. Ṛāṇāyanīya divided into seven: Rāṇāyaṇīya, Çāṭyamugrya, Kālopa, Mahākālopa, Lāṅgolayana, Çārdūla, Kauthuma; and the Kauthuma into seven: Āsurāyaṇa, Vātāyana, Prāñjalidvaitabhṛit, Prācīnayogya, Nekeya, Kauthuma (one name is thus omitted).

IV. Atharvaveda. A. 9: Paippala, Dānta, Pradānta, Auta, Brahmada, Balada, Caunaki, Devadaçi, Caraṇavidha.

B. 9: Pippala, Caunaki, Dāmoda, Tottāyana, Jābāla, Brahmapalāça, Kunakīra, Devadarçin, Cāraṇavidya.

A. 5 kalpas: Naxatrakalpa, Vidhānakalpa, Vidhividhānakalpa, Saṃhitākalpa, Çāntikalpa, and Pravarādhyāya.

B. do. Naxatrakalpa, Vidhānakalpa, Saṃhitāvidhi, Abhicārakalpa, and Çāntikalpa.

I have let several obvious errors remain, to show how incorrect the MSS. are. There are thus two texts of the Caraṇavyūha, which differ not only in the lists of Çākhās, but also of the divisions and number of verses in the Vedas. The text represented by A. is nearest to that followed in the Çabdakalpadruma.[1] This tract is so evidently written in the interest of the followers of the White Y. V., that it perhaps little deserves the importance which has been attributed to it.

(9,092) Gr. ll. 128. Breaks off at the beginning of the Mahānāmnī vv. All these MSS., except the last, belong to the Rāṇāyanīya or Kauthuma Çākhās, which as far as texts and notation go, do not differ. 9,092 begins: Āgne āyāhi vīta ka i. | gṛi ka ṇā no dā i | ni ghe hotā ishi | ba-e i an ho vā | ba ishi. This again differs from the Jaiminīyaçākhā, for a specimen of which see Catalogue, p. 49. The difference in the Çākhās of the S. V. (as far as they are known to me) consists entirely in the chant, but I have not seen this Çākhā (if it really be one) before.

LV.—2. Āraṇyagāna.

This work appears to exist in two distinct recensions; the Northern called Pushpasūtra, and the Southern called Phullasūtra. This difference also extends to the Commentary by Ajātaçatru. This C. (in the above MS.) begins with section 56 of the text in the preceding MS. Cfr. Weber's "Ueber das Saptaçatakam des Hāla," p. 259 note.

Bharatasvāmin was the son of Nārāyaṇa and Yajñadā, and lived at Seringapatam, in Mysore, about the end of the 13th century under the patronage of the Hosala family, a Canarese dynasty originally Jains, and converted by Rāmānujāçārya about 1150 to the Vaishṇava faith.[1] Rāma reigned at Devagiri from 1272, 3—1310, and this C. must, therefore, have been composed within that period. It is very concise, and there is every reason to believe that only the Pūrva-ārcika, Āraṇyakasaṃhitā, and Mahānāmnī hymns were commented on by Bharatasvāmin, for there is no trace of a C. on the Uttara-ārcika by this author; and here 9,112 (Bharatasvāmin's C.) and 9,108 (Sāyaṇa's C. on the U. Ā.) formed part of the same MS. originally.[2] I have seen this occur in another instance. Çaunaka, the Aitareyabrāhmaṇa, Āçvalāyanasūtra, the Taittirīyaka, Bahvṛica upanishad and (apparently) Yāska are quoted, so far as I have examined this C.

(9,112) Gr. 101 ll. Written about 1700. A little worm-eaten, but otherwise in good order. Extends to the end of the Mahānāmnī vv. (Begin l. 96, b.) The Āraṇyaka Saṃhitā begins l. 87.

(9,107) Gr. 105 ll. Much worm-eaten. This is a much more correct MS. than 9,112. Ār. S. begins l. 89. Çakvarībhāshya, l. 100. This MS. begins: Hosalādhiçvare, etc.

LXVIII.—Vedārthaprakāça, a C. on the Sāmaveda by Sāyaṇa.

An edition is begun in the Bibliotheca Indica.

(9,108) Gr. ll. 102.

Contains the C. on the Uttarārcika, adhyāyas i.—xvii. (= S. V. ii. 8, 1, 1, 1), but breaks off in the sixth l. of the last chapter. This is in the same hand as 9,112, and is a continuation of that MS. After the usual verses Sāyaṇa says:

"Chandobhidhā 'bhūd vyākhyātā, vyākhyāsyaty uttarābhidhām |
Chandasy ekaikaço 'dhītā (?) ṛik sām(n)o bhavanāya hi |
Stomanishpattaye sūktāny uttarāyām ādhīyate ||"

अथर्ववेदः ATHARVAVEDA.

LXXX.—1. Saṃhitā. The MSS. in this collection present the textus receptus as edited by Professors Roth and Whitney (Berlin, 8vo. 1855—6). The Kashmīr MSS. present a different text (see Prof. Roth's "Der Atharvaveda in Kaschmir," 1875).
(2,526) D. ff. 321, 9—10 lines to a page. Not accented. 20 k.k. Written at the end of the 18th or beginning of the 19th century.
(2,527) D. ff. 225. Kāṇḍas 5—20. Accented. Saṃv. 1884 (at Benares) = 1827 A.D.
(9,118 and 9,120) Gr. ll. 267 and 301. A careless and recent transcript from the above. Not accented.
(9,128 and 9,129) Gr. Two large bundles containing verses from the A. V. There are several hundred copies of the same verse, made (apparently) for recitations by a large number of Brahmans at the same time. Recent.

2. BRĀHMAṆA.

(2,528) a. D. 52 ff. Recent. (Written Saṃv. 1884 = ç. 1749 (= 1827 A.D.) at Benares.) Pūrvārdha.
b. D. 42 ff. Uttarārdha.
(9,122 and 9,125) Gr. ll. 146 and 116. A recent transcript from the above. These MSS. are unfortunately not correct.
The Atharvaveda does not exist in S. India. The above MSS. were brought for the late Rājā from Gujerat in order to enable him to have some peculiar rites performed. The text is in course of publication in the B. I.

It may be as well to remark that there is little chance that new çākhās of the Vedas, which present texts different from those already known, will be discovered in S. India. Sāyaṇa being a native of S. India commented on the texts he found in use there, and which have, in consequence, been generally received even in N. India. If different texts are in existence, it is probable that they will only be found in the more remote and secluded provinces of N. India.

VEDIC LITERATURE.—RITUAL.

PART II.

VEDIC SŪTRAS AND WORKS RELATING TO THEM.

I.—Sūtras of the Ṛigveda.

LXXXII.—A. 1. आश्वलायनसूत्रम् Āçvalāyanasūtra.

The Çrauta Sūtra and Gṛihya Sūtra have been edited in the B. I., together with Nārāyaṇa's Commentary. Professor Stenzler has edited the Gṛihya Sūtra, with a masterly German translation, in the "Abhandlungen für die Kunde des Morgenlandes," vols. 3 and 4. The Çrauta Sūtras extend from a. i.—xii.; the Gṛihya from xiii.—xvi.

(4,061) D. ff. 124. Written about 1750. 6 lines to a page. Adhyāyas i.—vi.

(4,062) D. 43 ff. A recent transcript of the beginning of the last MS.

(4,063) D. 46 ff. Do.

(4,064) D. ff. 60 a. i.—vi. Written in S. India about 1750.

(4,065) D. ff. 39. a. vii.—xii. Written Ç. 1610.

(4,066) D. ff. 39. A recent transcript of the last MS.

(4,069) D. ff. 112. Written about 1750. Edges of the ff. much worn.

(8,976) a. Te. ll. 59. a. i.—xii. Lacunæ.

b. Te. ll. 17. a. xiii.—xvi. Written about 1800.

(372) D. ff. 4. 16 lines to the page. Pravarādhyāya (xii. 10—15).

(371) D. ff. 6. A recent transcript of the last.

LXXXIII. a. Vṛitti by Nārāyaṇa.

(4,067) D. ff. 54. a. i. and ii. Written about 1700.

(4,068) D. ff. 70. Do. a. i. and ii.

(8,977) Gr. ll. 374. 8 lines to a side. Recent.

a. i. and xii.

(8,978) Te. ll. 100. Do. a. i.—viii. and a few much damaged ll. containing the beginning of a. ix. b. 9 lines to a side. Written about the end of the 17th century. A little worm-eaten.

LXXXIV.—b. Abhyudayapradā, a C. on the Āçvalāyanasūtras by Shaḍguruçishya (generally identified in S. India with a Çaṅkarācārya). Prof. Weber shows that he must have lived about the 12th century.

(9,131) Te. 153 ff. L. 1 is wanting, and of ll. 2—10 only fragments remain. Written in the beginning of the 17th century.

a. ii. begins l. 33—Iha çāstre ishṭayaḥ paçavas somāç ca ye upadishṭāḥ, te pūrṇamāsena vyākhyātāḥ.

a. viii.—l. 144, b—Praṇītam saptamādhyāye.

a. ix.—l. 152—Prakṛitis sarvavedoktā.

A few lines in a. ii. are much worm-eaten, but the rest is in very good order. I have noted quotations from Āpastamba and Çaunaka only. The opinion of 'others' is frequently given as regards the division of the Sūtras, but without mentioning names.

(4,060) D. ff. 90. a. i. and part of a. ii. (begins f. 53, b). A recent transcript of the last.

Āçvalāyanasūtrasya vṛittiṃ vitanute sudhīḥ || 2 ||"

Uktāni vaitānikāni gṛihyāṇi vaxyāmaḥ | nirūpitāni tretāni

[1] This is most probably the Minister of Çarabhatulajī, Rājā of Tanjore, and protector of Vāsudevadīxita's family (v. Catalogue, p. 27), and almost certainly not his own production. The date may be put at 1770 A.D.

(sic? retāgni-) sāṃnidhyāni karmāṇi gṛihyāṇi gṛihyasādhyāṇi | gṛihaçabdaḥ çālābhāryobhayavacanaḥ | tannimitto 'gnir gṛihyaḥ | tatra kartavyāni karmāṇi gṛihyāṇi; tāni vaxyāmaḥ | vadishyāma ity arthaḥ trayaḥ pākayajñāḥ | trayaḥ piṇḍapitṛiyajñāvikārabhinnasthālīpākapaçusomāḥ pākayajñāḥ pākayajñāsaṃjñāḥ kartavyāḥ | etc.

The verses used in the ceremonies are explained very diffusely.

(649) D. ff. 309. About 4,500 granthas. Recent.

a. ii. begins; l. 81. iii.—180; iv.—263. Carelessly copied. Lacunæ toward the end. Apparently a transcript from an ōlai original.

II.—1. Kārikās, etc., belonging to the Āçvalāyana Sūtras (çrauta).

XC.—Āçvalāyanaprayogavṛitti by one Vishṇu.

Begins:

"Samastamunijātasya hṛitpadmanilayasthita(ṃ) |

The author goes on to state that he follows Devasvāmin, Nārāyaṇa, and others. Ends abruptly on f. 82.

(9,132) Gr. ll. 145. Written about 1650. Broken and injured.

(4,071) D. ff. 82. A recent transcript of the last.

2. Kārikās and Prayogas belonging to the Āçvalāyana Sūtra (gṛihya)

XCI.—a. Āçvalāyanagṛihyakārikā by Bhaṭṭa Kumārilasvāmin. 883 çlokas in iv. chapters.

(720) D. ff. 53. Written in S. India about 1800. Begins:

Uktāny atrai 'va karmāṇi *çākalya*vacano 'bravīt (883) (sic!).

This MS. (though by no means correct) is fairly intelligible. It is interesting as a new work of Bhaṭṭa Kumārila (about A.D. 650—700), one of the most famous modern Sanskrit writers. His Mīmāṃsā treatises are well known, as also his commentary on the Mānavaçrautasūtras, which has been published by Dr. Goldstücker in a magnificent facsimile edition. These Kārikās simply versify the Sūtras of Āçvalāyana, which are often given nearly word for word. A vṛitti on the original Sūtras is quoted.

XCII.—b.

(654) D. ff. 51. Āçvalāyanagṛihyakārikā (?). Recent. Neither beginning nor end. Commences with the formation of the Sthaṇḍila. The name is taken from the margin; this work is, however, a Prayoga Manual for gṛihya, etc., rites, and chiefly consists of quotations from Çaunaka, Atri, the Saṅgraha, and similar works with kārikās interspersed here and there.

XCIII.—c. Bahvṛicagṛihyakārikā by Çākalācārya.

(721) D. ff. 88. A S. Indian MS. written about 1750. 8 lines to a page. About 1300 granthas. ff. 1—4 and 47—8 have been recently replaced. Begins:

"Çākalo 'haṃ prayogaṃ ca vaxye bah(v)ṛicakarmaṇāṃ |
Kārikāyām anuktaṃ yat tad eva hi samantrakaṃ ||
Ācāryasya ca vai yāvat satkarmādhvapradarçinī |
Procyate kārike 'tī 'ha sadbhiç cai 'va tu laukike ||
Apānapāṇipādasya çodhanaṃ çuddhikāraṇaṃ |
Sarveshām api varṇānām idam ādau pracaxate ||
Pādaṃ praxālayed viprah çauca eva hi daxiṇaṃ |
Paççāt savyam athā 'nyatra savyam ādau sadaxiṇaṃ ||
Susnātaḥ kṛitasandhyas tu çucir bhūtvā samāhitaḥ |
Gṛihyoktaṃ cā 'rabhet karma nityaṃ naimittikaṃ ca hi ||"

After this (Çauca) the chief subjects are as follows:—Snāna and Sandhya; Jātakarma; Nāndīçrāddha; Puṇyāhavācana and similar rites; Vivāha (f. 9); Sthālīpāka; Prāyaçcittas; Garbhādāna (f. 22); Āhnika; Brahmayajña (f. 26); and Çrāddhas (f. 28); Sahagamanaçrāddha; Sapiṇḍīkaraṇa; Āçaucavidhi (f. 30, b); Piṇḍapitṛiyajña (f. 33); Ashṭakāçrāddha (f. 36); Çāntikarma (f. 43, b); Vāstuprakaraṇa; Dīpavidhi; Kūpapratishṭhā; Navagrahamakha; Vishṇupratishṭhā (f. 59); Açvatthopanayana (f. 61, b); Açvatthavivāha (f. 62); Sarpasaṃskāra (f. 64, b); Mṛiyamāṇakarma (f. 69); Dattakavidhi (f. 77); Durmaraṇavidhi (f. 78, b); Nārāyaṇabali (f. 79, b); Pālāçavidhi (f. 80, b); Pretakriyā; Piṇḍadāna; Çrāddhakāle dīpadāna; Sannyāsavidhi (b. 85) Antyeshṭiprakaraṇa. Ends:

Ity evaṃ kathito dharmaḥ çākalena maharshiṇā | Looking at this work it is impossible not to remark how closely it resembles the Sāmagṛihyapariçishṭa, except that there is no prose (as far as I can see) in it; and that it is all attributed to Çākala. The same rites are treated in both works in exactly the same way, but in the S. G. pariçishṭa each section is attributed to a separate Rishi. The kārikā referred to in çl. 2 must, however, be that by Kumārilasvāmin; and, therefore, this is probably a late redaction of a work by Çākala, though many verses by him are certainly preserved in it unchanged.

(722) D. ff. 33. Many lacunæ. The end also is wanting. Labelled: Bahvṛicashoḍaçakarmamantravivaraṇa, which exactly explains the contents.

(726) D. ff. 8. A recent S. Indian MS. termed Saitaka-pañcavidhābhidhasūtra (sic). A prayoga-like treatise on the Āçvayujī, Çravaṇa, Ashṭaka, and Āgrahāyaṇa ceremonies, etc., and modifications of them. Begins: Gāḥ prakālyamāṇā anumantrayate 'mā me viçvato vīrya' iti; ends: iti saitakanāradaçīxāyāṃ (!) pañcavidhābhidhasūtraṃ.

A part of this Sūtra (i. b; 13—18) has been printed by Dr. Haas in his valuable article on the marriage rites according to the Gṛihyasūtras (I. S. v.). All the curious usages there mentioned, as regards the selection of a wife, are entirely obsolete; astrology now decides everything.

The author (who certainly does not stint himself in self-praise) then states that he consulted Brāhmaṇas, Mīmāṃsā, Chandas, Kalpasūtras, and even Kalāvidyā and Çilpa! He must have written about 1420—50. This introduction completely changes the received order of succession in the Vijayanagara dynasty, but is probably more correct than the four or five lists collected by Lassen (I. A.-K. iv., Beilage, pp. 976 ffg.).

As it is of some importance that the size and contents of the Āpastambasūtras should be known, I shall here give all the information that I have been able to collect.

The oldest authority that I know of on this subject is Caunḍappa's C. ("Prayogaratnamālā," see above) of the 15th century. He says (çl. 39—56):

The praçnas i.—xv. have already been described above; I will now give the beginning of the rest from a MS. I have been able to examine, and which is probably unique.

xxiv. a. Paribhāshāsūtra (see above).
b. Pravarasūtra (see above).
c. Hautraka.

This last section I have not yet met with.

It is thus evident that Caunḍappa's account is correct. One point remains to be noticed. He (Caunḍappa) entirely omits mention of two praçnas which treat of paitṛimedhika rites, and which are reckoned usually to be the thirty-first and thirty-second of the work. In some MSS. however of the thirtieth, thirty-first, and thirty-second praçnas (which are not uncommon in S. India), I have seen them numbered as the twenty-fifth, twenty-sixth, and twenty-seventh, and, apparently, excluding the Dharmasūtra.

Commentaries on the different sections of this huge sūtra are numerous; and in fragments, at all events, are not uncommon in S. India; but I cannot hear of anything like a complete copy of any one of them. Dhūrttasvāmin, and, perhaps, also Kapardisvāmin, have written commentaries (it is said) on the whole. The commentary by the first is very brief in parts, and not of much use in restoring the text as far as the 18 praçnas go which I possess. It has been annotated by Kāçikarāma.[1] There is also a comment on these sūtras by Gurudevasvāmin,[2] which is probably an old one, and another (of recent times) by Ahobalasūri.[3] It is not unlikely that Haradatta commented on the whole 30 sections; the tradition in S. India is, in fact, that he is the same as Rudradatta, whose C. has been already described. Under the name of Haradatta are commentaries on the Mantrapraçna, Gṛihya, and Dharma sections (xxv, xxvi, xxvii, xxviii, and xxix); his C. on the Gṛihya section he termed "Anākulā." Darçanārya has also explained the gṛihya praçna. I have a copy of an anonymous C. on the Paribhāshā-(Sāmānya-)sūtra which is probably by Tālavṛintanivāsin. The Çulva-praçna has been annotated by Karavindasvāmin, Kapardisvāmin[4] and Sundararāja. There are also Prayoga treatises which are more easily to be had than the commentaries, and which are described further on.

Of the Āpastamba sūtras but little has been published. Dr. Max Müller long ago translated the Paribhāshā section into German.[5] Dr. Bühler has edited the Dharmapraçnas (Bombay, 1868—1871), with extracts from Haradatta's C. and critical notes, and he promises shortly a translation which has been some time nearly printed. Prof. Eggeling has long promised an edition of the Gṛihya chapter. Perhaps the most interesting section of the whole is the Çulva chapter, which treats of the construction of altars; this involves (as I pointed out in 1869[6]) considerable geometrical knowledge, and must throw much light on the beginnings of Indian geometry. Dr. Thibaut has recently taken up this subject, and it is to be hoped that he will be able to bring out an edition. The Āpastamba and Baudhāyana sūtras differ much in this respect, and a comparison of the two is requisite, to say nothing of reference to the traditional diagrams for constructing these altars which may still be found here and there with Vedic priests, and without which (though perhaps sometimes erroneous) it is impossible to understand the necessarily great variety of bricks which are used.[7] (9,136) Gr. ll. 83—163. Paṭala 6 of Pr. iii. to the end of Pr. v.

I have already remarked[2] on the great difference one finds in the MSS. of this very useful and well-written manual. The above MSS. are no exceptions, and are not generally in a satisfactory condition. The first and second MSS. are the only ones ever likely to prove of use. Were an edition possible, it would be infinitely more useful an aid to understanding the Āpastambaçrautasūtra than all the commentaries together. If anywhere, complete copies should exist in S. India; but after many years' vain inquiry, I have come to the conclusion that only fragments are to be found. I have myself a copy of Praçnas xx.-xxii. and all before this can probably be had, but I have not seen any of this work beyond Pr. xxii.

CXVI.—B. बौधायनसूत्रम् Baudhāyanasūtra. I. ÇRAUTASŪTRA.

(9,147) Gr. ll. 180. Written before 1700.

P. i. (l. 1) begins: "Āmāvāsyena vā paurṇamāsena vā havi . . . . yaxyamāṇo bhavati," etc. 32 khaṇḍas.

xi. Do. iv. (l. 170, b). Prasarpanti tṛitīya-savanāya. Ends abruptly in kh. 16.

It is remarkable that these MSS. of the Baudhāyanaçrautasūtra do not give the number of each praçna; the numbers I have affixed (for convenience of reference) depend on the agreement between this MS. and that of Bhavasvāmin's C. and on the fact that the sūtras of the B. Y. V. resemble one another very closely.

CXVIII.—b. Subodhinī by Mahādeva Vājapeyin.

(9,165) a—f. Gr. Talipat, ll. 98, 49, 33, 41 and 64. A recent MS., several lacunæ. a. Praçna i. begins:

The author Mahādeva states that he was adhvaryu to one Tryāmbakādhvarin, by whose order he composed this C., following the opinions of Bhavasvāmin. This C. is exceedingly diffuse; the Baudhāyana, Karmānta, and Dvaidha sūtras are discussed, and quotations from the Āpastamba, Bhāradvāja, and other sūtras are frequent.

(3,743) D. 90 ff. Do. Recent. This MS. differs much from the last and is more correct.

For two other CC. and particulars of the contents of this work, see Catalogue, pp. 28–30; "Notices," ii. p. 82.

The Baudhāyanasūtra is very simple in its form; a comparison between the Baudhāyana and Āpastamba Çulvasūtras shows very conclusively that the growth of the sūtra style was gradual, and that the most artistic sūtras are the latest of the period when that style prevailed.

Unfortunately MSS. of the Baudhāyanasūtras and the CC. are rare and all incomplete. Some such have been described by me already ("Catalogue," pp. 24 ffg.) and for others see "Notices," ii. pp. 164, 180, and 270.[1] The Gṛihya section is, perhaps, not to be found in S. India, in good MSS. During many years' search, I have been unable to meet with a MS. that could be satisfactorily identified, but only with fragments of questionable authenticity. The reason of this is, that Vedic rites are now very rarely performed except in a most perfunctory manner, and that the few priests who even profess to know anything of them profess to perform rites according to rituals of which they are ignorant, in order to increase their gains. Thus the Apastamba ritual with a few arbitrary changes serves for the Baudhāyana, Bhāradvāja, etc., rituals, which do not really exist.

There are several CC. on the Baudhāyanasūtras (Weber, Literaturgeschichte, p. 111) by Bhavasvāmin (see above), Anantadeva, Navahasta, Çesha, Dvārkānātha,[2] and Sāyaṇa. The only MS. of the last as yet discovered is mentioned by Kielhorn (Catalogue of MSS. in the Southern Parts of the Bombay Presidency, p. 8); it is of great interest, as Sāyaṇa himself says that he followed this sūtra, and it is certain to be a complete and valuable C.

An edition of the Çulvasūtras is announced by Prof. Thibaut.

Dr. Bühler has found also some parts of the Bhāradvājasūtras in Gujarat (see his "Gujarat Catalogue," p. 186). One MS. contains the pariçeshasūtra, the other is extensive and may be complete. For a prayoga treatise on the grihya rites see my "Catalogue."

D. हिरण्यकेशिसूत्रम् Hiraṇyakeçisūtra. i. Çrautasūtra.

CXXXI.—Hiraṇyakeçisūtravyākhyāna by Hoçanikarṇāṭaka-Vāñcheçvara of Çahajīndrapura (or Tanjore); written about 1800 A.D. The author belonged to a Canarese (? Mysore) family settled in S. India.

After mentioning some of the Maharaṭṭa kings of Tanjore, the author says:

(3,855) D. ff. 58 and 45, 10 lines to a page.

The C. on the 1st sūtra ("Prātar agnihotraṃ hutvā 'nugamayitvā 'gnihotrikam apoddhṛitya vo 'dita āditye gārhapatyād āhavanīyam uddhṛitya 'mamā 'gne varca' ity anvādadhāti") begins f. 4, b; and the first praçna contains 8 paṭalas.

Praçna ii. begins: Agnaye samidhyamānāyā 'nubrūhī 'ti saṃpreshyati. 8 paṭalas. Ends: Iti çrīmatkāveritīravirājamānacoḷadeçāgrapūjyaçahajīndrapuranivāsihoçanikarṇāṭakavāñcheçvarasudhīviracite hi[raṇyakeçi]çrau[ta]sū[tra]vyākhyāne dvi° praçna ashṭamaḥ paṭalaḥ.

This seems a very excellent Commentary, considering the state of learning at the time it was composed. There are quotations from Çaunaka, from a gṛihyapariçishṭa(?), the Āpastamba and Bhāradvāja Sūtras, as far as I have examined it.

CXXXII. 2. Pitṛimedhasūtra, in ii. praçnas.

Praçna xxviii. Begins: athā 'taḥ paitṛimedhikaṃ dahanaṃ purushāhutir hy asya priyatame 'ti vijñāyate āhitāgner maraṇasaṃçaye dahanadeçaṃ joshayate daxiṇāpratyakpravaṇam aniriṇam asushiram anūsharam abhaṅguram anūpahatam.

Paṭala 1—f. 1; 2—5, b; 3—6, b. Praçna xxix. Begins: Dishṭagamanād ayuxv ahaḥsv ahorātrārdhamāsa-māsarttushu saṃvatsare vā nidadhāty (patala 4)—8; 5—10; 6—12, b; 7—12, b; 8—13.

(3,760) D. ff. 17. A recent S.-Indian transcript.

The difference between these two praçnas in the Bhāradvāja and Hiraṇyakeçi sūtras is very slight. In the first praçna of each there are 12 sections, which differ in a few words only. In praçna 2 the arrangement is

As far as the imperfect copies of the Āpastambapitṛimedhasūtra go (see above), it appears to be almost the same as the Bhāradvāja and Hiraṇyakeçisūtras. Dr. Bühler has noticed that the Āpastamba and Hiraṇyakeçi dharmasūtras are almost identical.[8] This is also partly true of the Çrautasūtras; the later, however (Āpastamba, e.g.), are much more artificially arranged than the earlier. For other MSS. of the Hiraṇyakeçisūtras see Bühler's Gujarat Catalogue, pp. 195—6, among which is mentioned a MS. of the Gṛihyasūtras.

ix. Atha trayoviṃçamukhair adhyāyair brāhmaṇe tribhiḥ. Ends l. 194: Sattreshu prathamaḥ.

x. Atirātraç caturviṃça. Ends l. 206, b.

xi Imperfect. Breaks off on l. 221. This MS. has many lacunæ in the beginning and middle, but it is a good MS. Written about 1650 and apparently copied from an ōlai original.

CXXXVII. D. Xudrakalpa.

(9,103) a. Gr. ll. 28—40. Very much injured. Written about 1650. The second adhyāya ends l. 31. The third begins: trayo varṇakalpā brāhmaṇasya rājño. The fourth a., which contains eight khaṇḍas, begins on l. 34, b; the fifth a. contains six kh. and the work ends with a. 6. Unfortunately this MS. will be of very little use, but there are others in existence (Aufrecht, "Catalogus," p. 377*b*).

This treats of expiations in connexion with Kalpa ceremonies. There is a MS. in the B.As. Society's Library at Calcutta, see "Notices," ii. p. 182.

(9,103) b. Gr. ll. 40—49.

Paṭala i. Atha saṃpatsiddhir anādeçe. 2 khaṇḍas.

——— vi. Nedishṭhini dīxite. 4 kh.

——— vii. Prishṭhānām anukalpa. 2 kh.

——— viii. Viçvajiti prajñātā.

This MS. ends in § 2 of this paṭala, on l. 49, b, a few broken ll. follow, but they are so much injured as to prevent their contents being made out. The name (Nidānasūtra) on this MS. is perfectly plain, but it does not agree with the MS. described by Dr. Weber (Verzeichniss, p. 74) in any way; whereas both it and the next MS. suit the descriptions given of the Upagranthasūtra.

(2517) D. ff. 30; 10 lines to a page. Written before 1700.

The same as the last, but divided in a different way, viz. into prapāṭhakas. P. i. contains 13 khaṇḍas. P. ii. (f. 9) corresponds with the beginning of paṭala v., and contains 13 khaṇḍas. Pr. iii. (f. 17, b) begins: Atha viçvasya varshakalpe and contains 13 khaṇḍas. Pr. iv. (24 b) begins: vitahavyām mokonidhanam çī 3 tā krā 3—and the MS. breaks off abruptly in the 12th khaṇḍa, in the fifth line from the beginning. The end of MS. 9,103 corresponds with the end of iii. 12 of this MS., about 25 letters being wanting. There is no name on this MS. According to the note on p. 210, A.S.L., there are 4 prapāṭhakas in this work. The MS. is therefore nearly complete.

CXXXIX. F. ?

(9102) Gr. ll. 13—129. Copied originally from a defective MS. and now much worm-eaten. This MS. contains sūtra-like remarks on the sacrifices, much as in the other Sāmasūtras. According to the title at the end its name is Kalpabrāhmaṇa. It is not, however (as far as I have been able to see), the Tāṇḍya brāhmaṇa, the anupada sūtra nor Maçaka's work. The MS. is so defective that it is impossible to say more than that greater part of the matter seems to correspond with parts of Maçaka's work, and is in style between a brāhmaṇa and a sūtra.

CXL. G. Gobhilagṛihyabhāshya, by Nārāyaṇa.

(683) D. 149 ll. 13 lines to a page. About 2500 gr. Begins:

PART III.

UPANISHADS. उपनिषद्:

(Mystical Theology.)

In drawing up the following list, I have chiefly used Professor Weber's articles (on Anquetil's versions from the Persian[1]) in his I.S.; Dr. Max Müller's list in Z. d. D.M.G. xix. pp. 137 ffg.; Dr. Haug's list in his "Brahma und die Brahmanen," pp. 29-30; and the list in my "Catalogue," pp. 59-65. All Upanishads are supposed to belong to the Atharvaveda, though the older occur in the other Vedas also. Some Upanishads are of very recent date. The total number of these tracts may be 250.[2]

1. Atharvaçikhopanishad.

(9,754) g. Te. ll. 31—33. About 1750.
Çaṅkarānanda's C. on the minor Upanishads seldom gives more than a mere Vedantic paraphrase, but it is very useful for restoring the very corrupt texts of these tracts, and also for deciding which among the many Upanishads which bear the same name is probably authentic; or, again, which name is the correct one, as we often find the same work with different titles. Unfortunately No. 9,754 is more a curiosity than a useful MS.; it is written in an almost microscopic hand, which is also exceedingly indistinct. Professor Cowell (in his edition of the Kaushītaki Up. p. ix.) inclines to the belief that Çaṅkarānanda was Mādhavācārya's preceptor. His date could then be almost 1300—1330 A.D.

Sureçvara is said by the Çaṅkaravijaya to have been a disciple of Çaṅkarācārya, and to have composed two Vārttikas. This statement appears to be taken from the above and the Vārttika to Bṛihadāraṇyakopanishad. All that is not evident fiction in the Çaṅkaravijaya appears to be taken from incidental remarks in the works of Çaṅkara and his followers.

In two Sections (Pūrva and Uttara), consisting of 5 upanishads and 5 khaṇḍas respectively. In the MS. in this collection the last section is identical with the Jābālop. (see No. 22); the first section here begins: Cinmaye 'smin mahāvishṇau jāyate . . . This work is very suspicious, see Z. d. D. M. G. xix. p. 153, where the names of two CC. are, however, given.

Sa ho 'vāca bhagavān rudraḥ—purā tripurabadhāya purā unmīlitāxo 'haṃ tebhyo jalabindavo bhūmau patitāḥ te rudrāxā jātāḥ. The rest answers the second part of the question.

SECOND SECTION.—SANSKRIT LITERATURE.

A.—TECHNICAL TREATISES.

I. Vyākaraṇa. I. Sanskrit Grammar.

As regards the general results at which I have arrived respecting the history of Sanskrit Grammar, I would refer to my Essay "On the Aindra Grammarians."

A. School of Pāṇini. 1. Pāṇini's Çabdānuçāsana and CC.

शब्दानुशासनम् or अष्टाध्यायी Çabdānuçāsana[1] or Aṣhṭādhyāyī, by Pāṇinī. First edited for H. T. Colebrooke, Calcutta, çak. 1731 (=1810), and next by Dr. Böhtlingk, 2 vols. 8vo. The sūtras alone have been printed at Madras in the Telugu character, and at Calcutta and elsewhere in Nāgarī.

(823) D. ff. 77. A made-up copy, chiefly in a N. Indian hand of the last century.
(824) D. ff. 60. With occasional vārttikas. In a Canarese hand of the last century.
(825) D. ff. 113. Do. Recent; much corrected.
(826) D. ff. 20. Sūtras only; in a small hand of about 1750.
(827) D. ff. 26 and 3. Do. A S. Indian MS. in two hands.
(828) D. ff. 132. Sūtras with notes. a iv. 1, 2—vii. Recent; much corrected in parts.
(830) D. ff. 23. Sūtras with occasional vārttikas. a i.—ii. 4, 18. Recent.
(831) D. ff. 10. Do. a i.—ii. 1, 31. Recent.
(832) D. ff. 17. Do. a i.—ii. 1, 24. Do.
(833) D. ff. 34. Do. a i.—iv. 1, 18. Do.
(834) D. ff. 40. Sūtras only, complete. Do.
(9,949) a. Gr. ll. 60. Sūtras with vārttikas.
b. Gr. ll. 148—276. Do.
(9,950) Te. ll. 25. a i.—iv. (beginning only). Not inked.
(2,422) D. ff. 29. The sūtras which refer to the Vedic dialect, collected.

In the above MSS. the vārttikas often differ considerably from those published in the first edition; there is however no independent tradition (in S. India at least), and these variations appear to depend entirely upon the Commentaries having been more or less misunderstood. (Cf. Dr. Kielhorn's "Kātyāyana and Patañjali," Bombay, 1876.)

a. Mahābhāshya, nominally a C. on the last by Patañjali, but chiefly on Kātyāyana's vārttikas.

The first nine āhnikas, together with Kaiyaṭa's Pradīpa and the Pradīpoddyota were printed at Mirzapore (1855, oblong folio) by Dr. Ballantyne. A photolithographic facsimile of a very valuable MS. (with the same commentaries) was prepared by Dr. Goldstücker and finished in 1874, and another edition has been brought out at Benares. Dr. Goldstücker has proved that this work was composed in Kaçmīr between 140 and 120 B.C.

(835) D. ff. 232. A Canarese (Mysore) MS. of about 1750, containing a i. 1, 1 (vṛiddhir āid aie) to the end of the adhyāya. Lacunæ.
(836) D. ff. 96. A continuation of the last containing a ii.
(837) D. ff. 123. Do. a iii.
(838) D. ff. 44, of which ff. 33 and 41 are wanting. This MS. is also in a Canarese hand of the last century. a iii. to 1, 91. Ends abruptly. Much worn.
(839) D. ff. 47. In the same hand as No. 835, etc. a iv. 93.
(840) D. ff. 146. Written about 1700. a vi. Worn at the end.
(841) D. ff. 188. Large ll. a i.—ii. (begins f. 180) Sūtra 1, in the comment on which this MS. breaks off abruptly. Recent.
(842) D. ff. 17. The beginning of a i. in a Canarese hand of about 1700. Much worn and illegible in parts.
(9,956) Gr. ll. 260. Written about 1750. a ii.—vi. 1, 12.
(9,957) Te. ll. 240. Written about 1650. a i.—ii. 2. āhnika 2 (=sūtra 35).
(9,958) Gr. originally ll. 79. Written in a small hand of about 1700. a i. 1. The first 10 ll. are wanting.
(9,959) Gr. ll. 160. Recent. a iii.—iv. 2, 138; a vi. (l. 114); a i. 1, 60 (l. 200); pāda 3, 63.
(9,960) Gr. ll. 65—200. Very clearly written about 1700, but injured in parts. a vi. 3, 13—viii. 1, 9. Begins and ends abruptly.
(9,961) Gr. ll. 84. Written about 1750. a vii.—viii. to to the end of pāda 1. Worm-eaten.
(9,962) Gr. ll. 41. Written about 1750. a viii., pāda 2 to sūtra 48 of p. 4.

In regard to the late Dr. Haug's remarks ("Brahma und die Brahmanen," p. 45) on the testimony of the Mahābhāshya to the existence of the Atharva-veda, it is necessary to observe that all the real S. Indian MSS. that I have seen omit the first words of that veda (if "Çaṃ no devīr," etc., really be the first verse), and give the commencement of the Rig-, Sāma-, and Yajur-vedas only. The order in which they are quoted varies, and probably depends on the veda which the copyist followed being placed by him in the first place. Thus Nos. 841, 842, 843, and 9,957 mention the Yajur-veda first, then the Rig- and Sāma-vedas; whereas others quote the Rig-veda first, and then the Sāma-veda. Similar variations I have observed in numerous S. Indian MSS. that I have examined, but I have never once met with a quotation from the Atharva-veda, which indeed does not exist in S. India.[1] "Çaṃ no devīr," etc., occurs in both the Rig- and Yajur-vedas, and is evidently quoted first here as being auspicious.

aa. Mahābhāshyapradīpa, a C. on Patañjali's Mahābhāshya by Kaiyaṭa.

(843) D. ff. 138, of which 40—43 are wanting. Recent, from Benares. Contains the text of the Mahābhāshya in the middle of the page, and the C. above and below it. a i., pāda 1 as far as sūtra 53.

[1] The Mahābhāshya shows that this is properly the first sūtra and title of the work, though it is omitted in all the printed editions and in most MSS.

[1] This fact cannot be too often asserted, for the geographical area of the chief Indian work is a matter of much importance. By Atharva (or Fourth) Veda the Korān or Bible is always intended by a native of S. India, as I have often found to my disappointment.

(844) D. ff. 63. a i. to pāda 3, āhnika 2. A recent S. Indian MS. The text in the middle of the page.
(845) D. ff. 63. A continuation of the last MS. a i. 4.

(853) D. ff. 119. A N. Indian MS. written about 1750. Kaiyaṭa's pradīpa only; begins with the end of āhnika 2 of pāda 1 of a i., and contains to the end of āhnika 9.
(854) D. ff. 130. A N. Indian MS. written about 1700. a ii.
(855) D. ff. 67 and fragments. Written about 1700. a v. Imperfect.
(9,963) Te. ll. 226. Written about the middle of the 17th century. a i. complete. Lacunæ; worm-eaten.
(9,964) Gr. ll. 152. Written about 1650. a i. to āhnika 3 of pāda 1 of a ii. Ends, bahulagrahaṇāc ca taxakas sarpo lohitas taxaka ityādau samāsabhāvaḥ.
(9,965) Gr. ll. 196. Written about 1600. Much broken and worm-eaten, and greater part not inked. Ends in pāda i. of a ii.
(9,966) Gr. ll. 131. Written about 1700. Worm-eaten. a vii. and viii. breaks off in pāda 2, āhnika 1.

(863) D. 93 ff. a vii.
(864) D. 86 ff. a viii. Written saṁv. 1775.
This copy (Nos. 856—864) appears to have been all written much about the same time, and by the same copyists in S. India.
(859) D. 16 ff. Written saṁv. 1832. a i., pāda 1, āhnika 5 only.

b. Kāçikā Vṛitti, a C. on the sūtra of Pāṇini, by Jayāditya according to some MSS., but Haradatta mentions the author as Vṛittikṛit only; the Bo. Cat., p. 44, mentions Vāmana as the author. Cf. Colebrooke, ii. 40. This has been printed in the "Pandit," 1874–5. It was (as Dr. Kielhorn has shown) begun by Jayāditya (down to about half) and finished by Vāmana.

bb. Padamañjarī, a C. on the Kāçikā Vṛitti by Haradattamiçra. Begins:

vyaktapradhānapurushātmakam asvatantram etat samastam adhitishṭhati yaḥ svatantraḥ | tasmai çivāya, etc.
tātaṃ Rudrakumārāryam praṇamyā'mbāṃ çriyaṃ tathā ‖

yaç cirāya haradattasaṃjñayā
* * * * * dixu daxiṇaḥ ujjahāra padamañjarīm asau çabdaçāstrasahakārapādapāt ‖

No. 9,978 (the only MS. in the library which contains the commencement) has l. 1 much broken, and I am therefore unable to give the interesting account of the author in a complete form. The whole work is believed to contain 36,000 granthas.
(875) D. ff. 150. a iv. A few lacunæ. About 4,600 granthas.
(876) D. ff. 35. a v. pāda 1. About 1,000 granthas.
(877) D. ff. 192. a vi. About 6,000 granthas.
(878) D. ff. 31. a vi. pāda 4 only.
(879) D. ff. 70. a vii.
(880) D. ff. 33. a viii. as far as pāda 3, 46, in which it breaks off abruptly. These are recent N. Indian MSS.
(9,977) Gr. ll. 117. Sūtra 1 of a 1 (vṛiddhir ādaic) to end of pāda. Some of the last ll. are wanting. Carelessly written about 1700.
(9,978) Gr. ll. 229. Written about 1650 and in tolerable order.
The beginning breaks off abruptly in the C. on sūtra 45 of pāda 2 of a i. About 2,800 granthas.
(9,979) Gr. ll. 143. a vi. 4 to about the middle of vii. 2. Written about 1700.

bbb. Mañjarīmakaranda, a vyākhyāna to the Padamañjarī by Raṅganātha,[1] son of Nārāyaṇadīxita and an inhabitant of the Coladeça, i.e. the Tanjore province. Begins (so far as can be seen):

Çrī rāmacandraṃ janakātmajaṃ patiṃ salaxmaṇaṃ rāxasamoxakāraṇam | namāmi vācā manasā ca mūrdhni vighnasidhyai kuladaivatan naḥ | yo nārāyaṇadīxitasya naptā nallādīxitasumniṇas tu pautraḥ çrīnārāyaṇadīxitasya putro vyākhyāmy eshāṃ hi raṅganāthayajvā | (sic.), etc.
(9,980) Gr. ll. 153. Written about 1650. Not inked. Contains as far as a i. 2, 41, in which it breaks off abruptly. Illegible.
This C. is very diffusive.

[1] The text is not correct and the name is therefore doubtful.

c. Çabdakaustubha, a C. on the sūtras of Pāṇini, by Bhaṭṭoji-dīxita. The first pāda of the first adhyāya was printed at Benares in 1876. It is a well-ascertained fact that this work was never finished, and it is generally stated that only four adhyāyas were completed, as we find here. This work is a sort of compilation from the Mahābhāshya, and follows the same division into āhnikas. Begins:

viçveçaṃ saccidānandaṃ vande'haṃ yo'khilaṃ jagat |
carīkarttī barībharti sañjarīharti līlayā ||
namaskurve jagadvandyaṃ pāṇinyādimunitrayaṃ |

prexāvat pravṛittaye vyākaraṇasya vishayam bhagavān bhāshyakāraḥ prādarçayat, 'atha çabdānuçāsanam'—iti. 'atha'—çabdaḥ prāraṃbhasya dyotakaḥ. nanu vācakaḥ nipātatvād upasargavan na ca te'pi vācakā eve'ti vācyam. upāsyate gurur; anubhūyate sukham; ity-ādau dhātoḥ sakarmaka-kriyāparatvaṃ vinā karmaṇi lakārayogena vācakatve sthite upasargāṇāṃ dyotakatvasyai' va yuktatvāt | etc.

(814) D. ff. 55. a i. pāda 1; wants end.
(815) D. ff. 28. a i. pāda 1.
(816) D. ff. 69. a i. as far as the end of āhnika 4. Wants the beginning.
(817) D. ff. 19. a i. A fragment wanting the beginning and end.
(818) D. ff. 128. Do. pādas 2—4.
(819) D. ff. 114. a i. About 6,500 granthas.
(820) D. ff. 103. a ii. ,, 3,000 ,,
(822) D. ff. 69. a iii. as far as āhnika 4, in which the MS. breaks off abruptly in the C. on sūtra 43 of the pāda.
(821) D. ff. 112. a iv. About 3,000 granthas.
These MSS. are all recent and from N. India.

d. Çabdabhūshaṇa, a C. on the sūtras of Pāṇini and the vārttikas, by Govindapuravāstavya-Nārāyaṇa. Begins:

yenā'xarasamāmnāyam adhigamya maheçvarād | etc. || 1 ||
yena dhautā giraḥ puṃsāṃ, etc. || 2 ||
vākyakāraṃ vararuciṃ bhāshyakāraṃ patañjaliṃ |
pāṇiniṃ sūtrakāraṃ ca praṇato'smi munitrayaṃ || 3 ||
vāṇīṃ pāṇiniṃ ācāryaṃ kātyāyanamuniṃ tathā |
kṛitāñjalir namasyāmi bhagavantaṃ patañjaliṃ || 4 || yogena cittasya padena vācāṃ
malaṃ çarīrasya ca vaidyakena | yo'pākarot taṃ pravaraṃ munīnāṃ patañjaliṃ prāñjalir ānato'smi || 5 ||
guruṃ natvā parabrahma dhyātvā nārāyaṇas sudhīḥ |
paryālocya mahābhāshyaṃ kurute çabdabhūshaṇaṃ || 6 ||

This is a miserable specimen of book-making; the author has simply taken his matter from the Siddhāntakaumudī which he carefully abstains from mentioning, and awkwardly interpolated the uṇādi and phiṭsūtras into the text of Pāṇini. He is said to have been a Tamil Brahman who lived in the last century.

(894) D. ff. 238. a i.—vi., pāda 1 (the uṇadisūtras with a C. between iii. 2 and 3), which ends f. 230. Then begins a C. on the Phiṭsūtra ('Phi°'—phiṭ prātipadikaṃ | uccaiḥ | anta udātta iti ā pādād adhikāraḥ 'Paṭa°,' etc.). Then follows Pāṇini vi. 2, which ends abruptly with the C. on sūtra 100. A very carefully and correctly written recent MS. on European paper.

(895) D. ff. 96. a i. to iii. 2, which ends on f. 94, b.
The remaining 2 ff. contain the beginning of a C. on the uṇādisūtra (to ii. 105). On the cover is a picture of the author (?) with shawl, large earrings and other articles of dress affected by soi-disant pandits.

(896) D. 120 ff. A rough modern transcript. Contains the C. on the Uṇādisūtra i. 67 to end of P. 5 ends f. 18. Then follows a C. on Pāṇini iii. 3, 1 to end of vii. pāda 1, and at the end is a C. on the Phiṭsūtra. Incomplete.

E. प्रक्रियाकौमुदी Prakriyākaumudī, by Rāmacandra, a pupil of Paramahaṃsa-Gopālācārya. This grammar (based on Pāṇini) is very superior to the similar and rival work, the Siddhāntakaumudī, and it is very singular that it should have been and still be so much neglected.

I. उणादिसूत्रम् Uṇādisūtra. The author's name is not known. Edited with Ujjvaladatta's C. by Aufrecht, 8vo., 1859, and reprinted (with much incorrectness) at Calcutta.

(829) D. ff. 12.
(9,994) Gr. ll. 172—176. This MS. (written about 1700) contains a new recension of these sūtras, which differs essentially from that edited by Dr. Aufrecht as regards the suspicious words ('jina,' etc., A.S.L. 245 ffg.), the sūtra here corresponding to iii. 2 omits ji. The other sūtras (iii. 25, 140 and iv. 184) do not appear to occur here at all. In pāda 1 the following sūtras are omitted: 42, 49, 103, 4, 5, 117, 119, 120, 1, 2, 3, 137, 140. The order of several sūtras is changed, three or four new ones are inserted, and numerous variations occur. In the other pādas a great many sūtras are omitted, and pāda 5 is much shorter, and differs greatly from the printed text. The MS. seems fairly correct, and the sūtras are divided, but it is written in a small not very legible hand, and several ll. are slightly injured at the right-hand side. See my Essay, "On the Aindra Grammarians," pp. 93–6, for a more complete account of this MS.

For another C. see Nārāyaṇa's Çabdabhūshaṇa (above, p. 39).

C. Vopadeva's system. Kavikalpadruma, a Dhātupāṭha by Vopadeva.

(9,951) Te. ll. 17. Written about 1650.

For commencement and account of the arrangement of the roots, see Aufrecht, Cat. p. 175. The Mugdhabodha is almost unknown in S. India; there, Pāṇini is the supreme authority, though few ever get beyond the Siddhāntakaumudī, and the study of Vyākaraṇa is now almost extinct. The few Jain paṇḍits read the Çākaṭāyanavyākaraṇa, but it is doubtful if there is now one alive who is acquainted with the system.

II. Prakrit Grammar, etc.

प्राकृतव्याकरणम् Prākṛitavyākaraṇa, by a Vararuci. Of this an admirable edition has been published by Professor Cowell (8vo., 1854), which only wants an index of the sūtras to make it complete.

(10,002) Te. ll. 31. Text accompanied by a C. (Prākṛita-manjarī), but name of the author is not given. In his introductory verses the commentator identifies Vararuci with Kātyāyana. About 1,300 granthas. Incorrect in parts.

(10,003) Gr. ll. 45. Containing pariccheḍas 5 (imperfect) to 7 (also imperfect), but so much broken and worm-eaten as to be useless.

On this C. see Pischel "De Grammaticis Prācriticis," pp. 10–11.

षड्भाषाचंद्रिका Shaḍbhāshācandrikā, a Prākṛit Grammar on the model of the Kaumudīs by Lakṣmīdhara, a pupil of Koṇḍabhaṭṭopādhyāya and son of Yajñeçvarabhaṭṭa.

(9,982) Te. ll. 111. Wants beginning and end. Begins in the Prākṛit declension, and ends abruptly in the Prākṛit tiṅanta section. Written about 1750. A few lacunæ.

The whole work (about 3,000 granthas) consists of 3

[1] The commentator on Kālidāsa, etc., is called Kolācala-mallināṭha, and is perhaps a different person.

adhyāyas, each with 4 pādas. The ordinary prākṛit (of the dramas) is discussed up to iii. 3, and the last pāda of this chapter gives an account of the rest. It begins:

Prākṛitaṃ, Çaurasenī, Māgadhī, Paiçāçī, Cūḷikapaiçāçī, Apabhraṃçā iti shaḍ bhāshāḥ. āsām itthaṃkāraṃ çeshātideçaḥ. Çaurasenīçesham prākṛitavat, etc. The whole is based on Hemacandra's work except as regards arrangement.

In the parts I have examined I have not noticed a single quotation. On this treatise see Pischel, "De Grammaticis Prācriticis" (Breslau, 1874) pp. 27 ff., and his edition of Hemacandra's Prākrit Grammar.

(10,005) Gr. ll. 155. Recent, but much injured in parts.

(10,006) Gr. ll. 202. Not inked at the beginning. Much worm-eaten.

(10,007) Gr. ll. 25. a i., pāda 1 incomplete. Much worm-eaten.

(10,004) Gr. ll. 12. Trivikrama's sūtras only. About 300 granthas.

षड्भाषासुबन्तरूपादर्श: Shaḍbhāshāsubantarūpādarça, a treatise on Prākrit, etc., declension (following the arrangement of the Kaumudīs). Composed for Tulajī rājā (of Tanjore, 1765–1788) by Nāgoba, son of Rāmajīpaṇḍita; a superficial tract.

(920) D. ff. 35. Probably autograph; of about 1750. granthas 420.

भांडीरभाषाव्याकरणम् Bhāṇḍīrabhāshāvyākaraṇa. This stupid piece of pedantry professes to teach a Prākṛit dialect, which arose as follows (9,996 l. 1 ff.):

Bhāṇḍīradeçe bhāṇḍīravaṭaçākhāprasārite |
bṛindāvanāntare kṛishṇaḥ pūrṇānandapariplutaḥ ||
kāliṅgagauḍakāmbhojāvantyasaurāshṭramāgadhaiḥ |

——————— gopastrīparibhāshitān |
mṛidvālāpān samādāya rāgān so' 'poshayan mudā ||

Nārada is then ordered to compose this grammar for the benefit of the world! It consists of a perversion of the sūtras of Pāṇini in order to produce a kind of Prākṛit. The existence of such a work as this may reasonably make one doubt the reality of the Paiçāca and some other Prākṛit dialects. See my "Aindra Grammarians," pp. 107–110. I must remark that though this language appears to me to be fanciful and artificial, several authorities (e.g. MM. Barth and Senart) consider that it may have a foundation in fact.

III. आंध्रशब्दचिंतामणि: Āndhraçabdaçintāmani. A Sanskrit Treatise on Telugu grammar (in sūtras) by Nannayabhaṭṭa. Several times printed at Madras.

(10,008—10,019). These MSS. contain fragments of Nannaya's work and explanations of it by Annambhaṭṭa and Tātaṃbhaṭṭa, but all are so much worm-eaten and in such a defective condition that it is not possible to give a description. Greater part of the explanations is in Telugu. No. 10,016 is the best preserved, and contains the text with a brief anonymous commentary.

Nannaya Bhaṭṭa's Telugu grammar is considered to be the standard one. It contains 274 sūtras in 4 pariccheda (Saṃjnā; Sandhi; Ajanta; Halanta; Kriyā). The technical terms are often Pāṇinīyan, and the Telugu language is treated as a vikṛiti of Sanskrit and Prākṛit, Telugu terminations, etc., being substituted for the Sanskrit technical words, and even the Telugu gaṇas being given in Sanskrit translations. As Mr. C. P. Brown long ago pointed out, this is a treatise on particular points rather than a complete grammar. A critical edition was contemplated by the late Major Carr; I hope, some day, to publish one.

II. Kosha. (Lexicography.)

I. अमरकोश: Amarakosha or Trikāṇḍa (properly nāmalingānuçāsana), by Amarasiṃha. This celebrated work has been repeatedly printed in India; the first edition was in 1807. The editions by Colebrooke (1808 and 1825) and Loiseleur-Deslongchamps (Paris, 1839) have also explanations added. There is a very mechanically made translation into Tibetan of the text, and also of Subhūti's Commentary (see Bulletin IV. 297, in Schiefner's article, "Die logischen und grammatischen Werke im Tanjur"). This version represents the text of about the 14th century.[1] The earliest C. now existing (by Xīrasvāmin) is not much older (about the 11th century), but it notices various readings. As the Amarakosha is a common schoolbook, and is always corrected after one or more of the Commentaries, it will be useless to look for various recensions or even readings in mere MSS. of the text, as (if any do occur) they are certainly the result of careless writing or of the misunderstandings of the Commentaries, and are not real.

a. Amarakoshodghāṭana, a C. on Amarasiṃha's work by Kṣīrasvāmin. This is perhaps the oldest existing commentary on this text, but it at all events cannot be older than the end of the 11th century, as in the Commentary on i. 1, 4, Kṣīrasvāmin says that Bhojarāja had explained a passage in a different way. 'Çrībhojarājas tv anyathā vyākhyāt.' The compiler uses the technical terms of Pāṇini's school, and relies chiefly on Bhāguri; his explanations are very brief, and contain generally the mere etymology, often he gives several inconsistent derivations of the same word. Rarely he gives interesting details, e.g. of the Tushitas he says: bauddhapātañjalapurāṇādau dṛishṭāḥ. Of Mārajit he says: 'bauddhās tu: skandhamāraḥ kleçamāro mṛityumāro devamāraç ce'ti caturo mārān āhuḥ.'

A MS. of this work (in the I. O. London[1]) has been fully described by Professor Aufrecht (Z. d. D. M. G. xxviii., pp. 105, ffg.). So far as the imperfect condition of the Tanjore MS. permits me to compare the two, it would appear that they differ in several respects. Professor Aufrecht gives the authors, etc., quoted as follows: Abhidhānakāra, Amaramālā, Indu, Udīcyas, Upādhyāya, Kātya, Kādambarī of Bāṇa, Kālidāsa, Kāçikā, Kāçmīras, Kauṭilya, Gauḍa and Gauḍas, Gautama, Candra, Candranandana, Cāṇakya, Cāndra, Jaimini, Tāntrika, Dantika, Durga, Deçī (language), Dramiḍas, Drāviḍas, Dhanurveda, Dhanvantari, Nanda, Nāmamālā, Nārada, Nighaṇṭu, Padmāvatī, Pātañjala, Pālakāpya,[2] Pāçcātyas, Pratīcyas, Prācyas, Bauddha, Bhaṭṭa, Bharata, (Mahā-) Bhārata, Bhoja, Manu, Mālā, Muni, Yājñavalkya, Yogaçāstra, Raghuvaṃça, Rabhasa, Vāgbhaṭṭa, Vātsyāyana, Vāmana, Vāsavadattā, Çāçvata, Çesha (not the Trikāṇḍaçesha), Saṃhitas, Suçruta, Śūdaçāstra, Sauratantra, Harshacarita.

Another MS. of this book is mentioned in the Central Provinces Cat. pp. 92–3, but must be a fragment only. Others are mentioned in the Gujarat Cat., No. 3, pp. 36–7.

[1] The one used by Colebrooke. Amerakosha (2nd ed.), p. viii.
[2] Prof. Aufrecht says that this is a treatise on horses, but should it not rather be said on elephants? See the account of MSS. of a work bearing the same name, below (vii. Vaidyaçāstra).

The commencement of this C. is as follows:

Dī(çy)āc chivāni çivayos tilakāyamānaṃ

The complete work would probably contain 5,000 granthas.

(5,530) a. D. ff. 1—71. Contains K. i. and beginning of K. ii., which ends abruptly in Çl. 60 a, of the Vanaushadhivarga. ff. 1—4 are much worn; ff. 42 (beginning of the pātālavarga); 46 (beginning of the Vārivarga), and 50 (last f. of K. i.) are torn and injured.

——— b. D. ff. 1—169. Contains the end of K. ii., beginning with siṃhādivarga, and K. iii. (begins l. 80). ff. 94—119 are only partly legible, having been damaged by water; they contain the first varga of K. iii. f. 121 has half torn off, and only the middle of the concluding page remains.

——— c. D. ff. 5. Contains the mere text of the missing part of the Commentary, viz. about 100 çlokas of K. ii. Vanaushadhivarga.

This MS. is all in a S. Indian hand of the end of the 17th century. On the whole (except in a few places) the text seems pretty correct, but the MS. is so much worn and injured by careless and constant usage that it is difficult to read in many places. As however this commentary is now unknown to the paṇḍits and is very rare, even an imperfect MS. may be of importance when the much needed critical edition of Amarasiṃha's text is begun. The copious quotations in Bhānuji's C. are, I find, correctly made, and of considerable use in restoring and correcting this MS.

b. Amarakoshapadavivṛiti, by Liṅgayasūri, son of Vaṅgala Kāmaya Bhaṭṭopādhyāya. Begins:

Çivaṃ hariṃ vidhātāraṃ tatpatnīs tatsutāṃç ca vai |

padavākyapramāṇajñaxīrasvāmyādisūribhiḥ |

The name of this book is generally given as Liṅgābhaṭṭīya; it and the next are said to have been used for the Commentary on the Amarakosha published at Madras in 1873, 4to. (grantha).

c. Ṭīkāsarvasva, by Vandyaghaṭīya[1] Sarvānanda. Begins:

d. Vyākhyāsudhā, by Bhānujidīxita, son of Bhaṭṭojidīxita. In some MSS. (e.g. 5,535, 5,580) the author's name is said to be Rāmāçrama of Gujerat, a pupil of Bhaṭṭoji, he is stated to have composed this Commentary for Kīrttidevasiṃha of the Vadgela family, adhipa of the Mapiyara-Vishaya. It has been lithographed at Benares (oblong folio 50, 130 and 58 ff. s. a.). Begins:

vallavīvallabhaṃ natvā guruṃ bhaṭṭojidīxitam |
āmare vidadhe vyākhyāṃ munitrayamatānugām ||
prārīpsitasya pratyūhāpanuttaye kṛitaṃ maṅgalaṃ çishyaçixārthaṃ ādau nibaṇdha yasye'ti, etc. The author generally agrees with (Xīra-) svāmin, but criticizes Mukuṭa very severely. For an imperfect list of books the author quotes, see Aufrecht's Cat. pp. 182-3.

e. Gurubālabodhinī, an explanation of the Amarakosha, partly in Telugu. This was compiled at the end of the last century by two Paṇdits of Tanjore; their names have not been preserved. This C., it appears, was never finished. A work with the same name has been printed at Madras, but I have not been able to identify it with this.

(10,393) Te. ll. 140.

(10,394) Gr. ll. 158.

The "Bodhinī" is quoted, most likely the last work, of which this is probably the continuation.

V. हेमचंद्रीयम् Hemacandrīya (sic!). The author's name is not mentioned. Begins:

Begins: somāṅgaṃ uttaṃsayate (5,541).
girijāxīnīlanīraja himakara° (5,555) (3rd verse of other MS.) paribhāshā.

[1] That name is by no means certain; some MSS. have Vandighaṭī° and others Vandibhaṭṭīya, etc. Colebrooke (Kosha, 2nd edition, p. x.) mentions Vandīyabhaṭṭa. The best form of this 'house-' or 'family-name' seems the above, which is given in the oldest and best grantha MSS. The author must have been a native of the Deccan.

(5,541) D. ff. 21. K. i. Wants conclusion; a recent S. Indian MS.

(5,555) D. ff. 66. A recent S. Indian MS.; breaks off abruptly at the beginning of K iii.

(5,563) D. ff. 31. A rough and very incorrect copy of about 1700.

(10,438) Gr. ll. 9. A good MS., differing much from the others.

The whole is here divided into i. Çabdasaṃkīrṇarūpaṇa-, ii. Çabdasaṃkīrṇaprarūpaṇa-, and iii. Çabdavistīrṇarūpaṇa-paricchedas. Written about 1700. Worm-eaten; ll. 6 and 9 half broken off.

(10,439) Te. ll. 9. Worm-eaten; written about 1700.

(10,440) N. N. ll. 12. Worm-eaten; written about 1700.

(10,464) a. Te. ll. 1—17. Written about 1720; a few lacunæ, and far from correct in parts.

I have endeavoured to correct the somewhat corrupt text; where the mistake in spelling was evident I have not marked it; where additions or alterations have been made they are in [ ]. The synonyms of some names well known in Sanskrit literature are interesting, especially the identification of Vatsyāyana and Paxilasvāmin. That of Dāxiputra=Pāṇini has been already identified by Professor Goldstücker (Pāṇini's Place, pp. 210–1). This short vocabulary agrees in many respects with iii. 138 ffg. of the Bhojanighaṇṭu (No. VIII.). Çl. 3b—4a exactly agree with 138b—139a, and çl. 6 with 141b—142a, of the last-mentioned work. Some of the others also agree to a considerable extent with çlokas in the work attributed to Bhoja. As Agastya is a great personage in S. Indian tradition, he is probably here placed first by reason of the author coming from that part of India; a native of N. India would hardly have arranged the names thus. The author's authority for these identifications remains to be tested.

[1] MS. dharuṇo.

X. आगस्त्यव्याकरणोक्तशब्दसंग्रहनिघंटुः Āgastyavyākaraṇoktaçabdasaṅgrahanighaṇṭu (sic!). The author's name does not appear. A number of synonyms of names of gods, etc., hitched into çlokas. Begins:

Ends: brahmalokas satyalokas tatra pūrvaparājitā ||

(10,463) f. Te. ll. 20—28. About 120 gr. Agastya is said to have introduced culture into S. India; what the Āgastyavyākaraṇa means, I cannot say; the Tamil Grammar said to have been written by him can hardly be intended.

XI. प्रयुक्तपदमंजरी Prayuktapadamañjarī, by Īçvarakṛishṇa Kālidāsa. Begins:

(5,572) D. ff. 61. A recent S. Indian transcript; about 2,000 gr.

This appears to be included in the Calcutta edition (1807) of the Abhidhānacintāmaṇi which is, however, not accessible to me at present.

XXVIII. नानार्थरत्नमाला Nānārtharatnamālā, a dictionary of homonyms by Daṇḍinātha (Daṇḍādhinātha) or (v. l.) Bhāskara. Composed (in the 14th century?) for a king Harihara.

vedānām api mūrdhā no yan nirdhāraṇabhīravaḥ |

The author calls himself Daṇḍeça. In this work the words are arranged in 6 kāṇḍas (ekāxara, 1; dvyaxara, 2; tryaxara, 3; caturaxara, etc., 4) according to the number of syllables (1—7), then follows a saṅkīrṇa (5); and lastly the indeclinables (6) arranged in the same way as the rest. The genders are indicated by the same technical terms as in the Amarakosha (trishu, dvayoḥ, etc.).

(5,570) D. ff. 75. A recent and incorrect S. Indian transcript, full of lacunæ; ends abruptly in Saṅkīrṇa section (last but one).

(10,426) Gr. ll. 79. Recent; broken at the beginning.

(10,427) N.N. ll. 64. Written about 1700. A little worm-eaten.

(10,428) Te. ll. 46. Ends abruptly in the last section. Written about 1700.

(10,429) Gr. ll. 90. Written about 1650. The first l. has been replaced; ends abruptly in saptāxara section.

(10,430) Te. ll. 84. Worm-eaten.

(10,431) Gr. ll. 6—16. A useless fragment of the Dvyaxara section.

XXIX. कविदर्पणनिघंटुः Kavidarpaṇanighaṇṭu, a dictionary of homonyms arranged according to the final consonants by Rāma, Çokakaropādhyāya (sic) (10,449). The name is not given in all the rest. Begins:

kalyāṇaikanivāsāya jānakījātaye namaḥ |
āsīd anucaro yasya çabdabrahmamayo'nujaḥ ||
koshāntareshu dṛishṭāni saṅgṛihītāni ca svataḥ |
ucitāni padāny atra paçyantu kavipuṅgavāḥ ||

The genders, etc., are indicated as in the A. K.
tvaṃtātthādikam adhvānam anu . . tyā'*maro*ditaṃ |
nighaṇṭur ucyate; mārgaṃ kas tyajid pūrvakalpitaṃ ||
1,325 gr. Ends:
nā'ndhāḥ paçyanti nukure rūpaṃ yadi sunirmale |
mukurasyā'sti ko doshas? tatkartur vā? vicintyatāṃ ||
(5,576) D. ff. 73. Many lacunæ. A S. Indian MS. of about 1700. Not by any means correct.
(10,448) Te. ll. 54. Lacunæ; written about 1700.
(10,449) Te. ll. 47. Similar to the last.
(10,450) Gr. ll. 31. Written about 1680.

XXX. वैजयंती Vaijayantī, by Yādava-bhaṭṭa or Yādavasārvabhauma.

The MSS. in this library contain only the part which treats of homonyms (anekārthakāṇḍa or çeshakāṇḍa).
(10,441) Gr. ll. 87. Written about 1650, but in good order. Begins:
atha kāṇḍe'nekārthāḥ procyaṇte vistṛitais tribhiḥ |
dvyaxarās tryaxarāḥ çeshā iti kāṇḍeshu te kramāt || 1 ||
akārādi xakārāṇtaṃ nāmnām ādyaxarakramāt |

vyavahāre dhane çāstre vastuhetunivṛittishu ||
arkko'rkkaparṇe sphaṭike jyeshṭhabhṛātari | etc.

Words are arranged firstly according to the number of letters, and secondly according to the gender. In each subdivision they are then placed according to the initials. The whole closes with sections on indeclinables and on gender. This MS. is carelessly copied and in a very illegible hand.
(5,556) D. ff. 5. The commencement only; a recent S. Indian transcript.
(10,442) Gr. ll. 65. Probably the original of the last; it now is much broken and but little remains of several ll.

atha nāmnām iho'ktānām anuktānāṃ ca sarvaçaḥ |

The sections treat of napuṃsakaliṅgāḥ, nṛishaṇḍa°, strīshaṇḍa°, triliṅgāḥ, artthaliṅgāḥ, and sāmānyaliṅgāḥ. Ends: vaijayantīm iva vaijayantīm.

About 30 gr. Containing (except in 2 or 3 çlokas) in the first pāda 3 words in the nominative, and in the next 3 in the locative. It seems to be intended that the meaning of the first word in the first pāda should be expressed by the first in the second, but nearly all the words are very unusual, and the MS. is far from correct. Begins: Nilimpakaṃ tu kutkilās (?). The beginning appears to be wanting. The following will serve as a specimen:

(The Sanskrit explanation is from the C.)
(5,358) D. ff. 41; written 1508 (?). Probably copied at the end of the last century from an older original. Carelessly written, but tolerably correct. About 800 granthas.
(5,359) D. ff. 13. A sort of abstract of Piṅgala's work, containing rules for different metres and examples. Carelessly written; recent.

a. Piṅgalārthadīpa (the name is nearly illegible), by Laxmīnātha, son of Rāyaṇṇabhaṭṭa, (as his name proves) a native of S. India.

(5,360) D. ff. 96. Written çak. 1554, at Jūnarapura, which appears to be in the Mahraṭṭa country, as the final entry is partly in the Mahraṭṭa language. This MS. contains the first (or mātrāvṛitti) pariccheda only. It is very correct, but a little worm-eaten in parts. In the introduction (stanza 5—6) the author gives some account of his family.

Bhaṭṭaçrīrāmacandraḥ kavivibudhakule labdhadehaḥ çruto yaḥ |
crīmān nārāyaṇākhyaḥ kavimukuṭamaṇis tattanujo 'janishṭa | tatputro rāyabhaṭṭaḥ sakalakavikulakhyātakīrttis
tadīyo laxmīnāthas tanujo racayati rucirapiṅgalārthapradīpam || 5 || çrīrāyabhaṭṭatanayo laxmīnāthaḥ samullasatpratibhūḥ
chandasi piṅgalabhaṇite tanute ṭīkām udāramatiḥ || 6 ||

He does not refer to previous commentators. At the end of the introduction he says: granthārambhe granthakṛid abhimatasiddhaye chandaḥçāstrādhishṭhātṛipiṅgalanāgānusmaraṇalaxaṇamaṅgalam ācarati, whence it appears that he does not consider Piṅgala to be the author. This MS. contains about 1700 granthas.

(1862 and ff. years). An anonymous C. is described in "Notices," pp. 165–6, No. ccxcvii. See also Aufrecht, Cat. pp. 203–6. A Tibetan translation exists in the Bstan-hgyur (vol. 117), under the title Sñan-dṅags-kyi me-loṅ ("Mirror of sweet speech"). See Bulletin, iv. p. 297; also "Melanges Asiatiques," i. p. 416, where the name is slightly different. In the same place there is also mentioned a Tibetan C., the original Sanskrit name of which is very corrupt, but seems to be "Sarasvatīpriyagītiçvara."

mūlaṃ vishayabhūtasya netur guṇanirūpaṇam ||7||

The author quotes Bhāmaha, Udbhaṭa, Rudrabhaṭṭa, Daṇḍin (the quotations I have noticed are from the Kāvyādarça), Bhojarāja,[1] the Daçarūpa, Çṛiṅgāratilaka, Kāvyaprakāça, and a Dharmasūtra. The first section contains the Nāyakaguṇanirūpaṇa. These qualities are:

mahākulīnatāujjvalyaṃ mahābhāgyaṃ udāratā |
tejasvitā vidagdhyatvadhārmikatvādayo matāḥ ||

but in spite of this liberal allowance, he assures us that Pratāparudra's eminent endowments are beyond the powers of speech to describe! Next comes the Nāyakasvarūpa—

yaçaḥ pratāpasubhago dharmakāmārthatatparaḥ |
dhurandharo guṇāḍhyaç ca nāyakaḥ parikīrtitaḥ ||

After this he describes the 8 kinds of heroines—

svādhīnapatikā cai'va tathā vāsakasajjikā |
virahotkaṃpitā cai'va vipralabdhā ca khaṇḍitā ||
kalahā 'ntaritā cai'va tathā proshitabhartṛikā |
tathā 'bhisārikā ce'ti kramāl laxaṇaṃ ucyate ||

These sections form the Nayakaprakaraṇa.

[1] kaver alpā 'pi vāgvṛittir vidvatkarṇāvataṃsati |
nāyako yadi varṇyeta lokottaraguṇāçrayaḥ ||
(For varṇyeta in some MSS. there is jāyeta).

Next comes the Kāvyasvarūpaprakaraṇa (ii.)—atha kāvyasvarūpaṃ nirūpyate—

guṇālaṃkārasahitau çabdārthau doshavarjitau |
gadyapadyobhayamayaṃ kāvyaṃ kāvyavido viduḥ ||

This is followed by the Nāṭyaprakaraṇa (iii.)—atha nāṭyapradhānāḥ prabandhā nirūpyante-tatra nāṭyasvarūpaṃ nirūpyate—

caturvidhair abhinayaiḥ sātvikāṅgikapūrvakaiḥ |
dhīrodāttādyavasthanukṛitir nāṭyaṃ rasāçrayam ||

In this section (which is based on the Daçarūpa) the author gives as an example a complete nāṭaka, the "Pratāparudrakalyāṇa." It is in 5 aṅkas, and here and there are explanatory notes showing how the rules are followed.

The next, or "rasa" (iv.) section begins—atha sarveshāṃ prabandhānāṃ jīvitabhūtasya rasasya svarūpaṃ nirūpyate—vibhāvānubhāvasātvikavyabhicārisāmagrīsamullasitaḥ sthāyībhāvo rasaḥ | In the last part the Çṛiṅgāraceshṭāḥ are described.

The "guṇaprakaraṇa" begins (v.)—atha kāvyajīvitarasanirūpaṇānantaraṃ tadupaskārahetūnāṃ guṇānāṃ samyag vivekāya doshā nirūpyante—tatra doshasāmānyalaxaṇaṃ|doshaḥ kāvyāpakarshasya hetuḥ çabdārthagocaraḥ |

The "alaṅkāraprakaraṇa" begins (vi.)—atha guṇanirūpaṇānantaraṃ alaṅkārā nirūpyante | alaṅkriyate 'nene 'ti cārutvātiçayahetur alaṅkāraḥ. çabdālaṅkāra is briefly treated; arthālaṅkāra at some length.

The last section begins (vii.)—atha saṃsṛishṭisaṃkarā nirūpyante | yathā laukikāyālaṅkārāṇāṃ hiraṇmayānāṃ maṇimayānāṃ ca pṛithak saundaryahetūnām anyonyasambandhena cāratvātiçayo dṛiçyate, tathai 'va kāvyālaṅkārāṇāṃ rūpakādīnāṃ mithaḥsaṃbandhena saundaryātiçayaḥ pratīyate | sa ca saṃbandho dvividhaḥ | saṃyogarūpaḥ samavāyarūpaç ce'ti | saṃyoge tilataṇḍulanyāyaḥ | samavāye xīranīranyāyaḥ | tilataṇḍulanyāyena saṃsṛishṭiḥ | xīranīranyāyena saṃkaraḥ. |

The whole forms an easy and complete introduction to the modern school of Indian rhetoric, but chiefly consists in a compilation from the Daçarūpa and Kāvyaprakāça. What there is original in it consists of examples intended to glorify Pratāparudradeva (often not only absurd, but paltry), and the application of the rules. The whole contains about 2,700 granthas.

a. Ratnārpaṇa, a C. on the Pratāparudrayaçobhūshaṇa by Kumārasvāmin, son of Kolācala Mallinātha, and younger brother of Peddārya. Begins:

kalyāṇaṃ vitanotu kaçcana pumān, etc.

This C. supplies scarcely any useful information concerning the text. Its author explains Kākatīya (Pratāparudra's surname) as derived from the name of a Çakti goddess—

"kākatīye 'ti | kākatir nāma durgā çaktir *Ekaçilā*nagareçvarāṇāṃ kuladevatā. Sā çaktir bhajanīyā 'sye 'ti kākatīyā." He, however, omits to give any account of Pratāparudradeva, which would be more valuable.

(10,474) Te. ll. 217. Much worm-eaten at the beginning.

(10,475) Te. ll. 64—160. A beautifully written MS. of about 1650; but not inked. Breaks off in the 4th prakaraṇa near the end. (Begins l. 54). This MS. is much more correct than the others.

XX. मधुधारा Madhudhārā, this is said to be a vyākhyāna to the alaṅkāramañjarī, but the text is not in this collection. It is by Sudhīndra-yati, pupil of Vijayendrapūjyapāda, and is evidently a recent work based on the Kāvyaprakāça. Begins:

yat kartṛikaṃ jagad idaṃ yad anupravishṭaṃ yasmin muhur niviçate yad ananyanātham | etc.

(10,550) Gr. ll. 69. Recent and not inked.

(10,551) Gr. ll. 98. c. 1750. These MSS. end with Çabdālaṅkāra, and therefore are probably complete.

XXIV. रसार्णवः Rasārṇava, a similar treatise, by Siṃhamahīpati. The nominal author is said to have been a Tanjore prince of the last century. The work does not appear to have been ever finished, and it is certainly not a matter for regret that such is the case.

XXV. वाग्भटालंकारः Vāgbhaṭālaṅkāra, an elementary treatise on rhetoric by Vāgbhaṭa, who in S. India (at least) is usually identified with Amarasiṃha and the author of the Aṣṭāṅgahṛidaya (see Vaidyaçā°, p. 65). The story runs that he was a Brahman, who, in order to refute the Buddhists (or Jains?), became the pupil of a teacher of that sect, and on his return to his old Guru, discovered so much lukewarmness towards Brahmanic teaching, that he was advised by him to openly join the heretics, who had his sympathy. According to the verses found in a complete copy by Professor Aufrecht (see i. p. 214*a*), the author lived during the reign of one Jayasiṃha.

(5,331) D. ff. 5. A MS. written about 1700, on porous paper, and since injured by damp, so as to be almost illegible in parts. This contains only as far as çl. ii. of Pariccheda iii. It begins:

çriyaṃ diçatu vo devaḥ çrīnābheyajinaḥ sadā |
moxamārgaṃ satāṃ brūte yadāgamapadāvalī ||
sādhuçabdārthasandarbhaṃ guṇālaṅkārabhūshitaṃ |
sphuṭarītirasopetaṃ kāvyaṃ kurvīta kīrtaye ||
pratibhā karaṇaṃ tasya, vyutpattis tu vibhūshaṇam |
bhṛiçotpattikṛidabhyāsa ityādyakavisaṅkathā ||

Pariccheda i. contains 26 çlokas; P. ii. contains 28 çlokas, and begins:

saṃskṛitaṃ prākritaṃ tasyā 'pabhraṃço bhūtabhāshitam |
iti bhāshāç catasro 'pi yānti kāvyasya kāyatām ||
saṃskṛitaṃ svargiṇāṃ bhāshā çabdaçāstreshu[1] niçcitā |
prākṛitaṃ tac ca tattulyaṃ; deçyādikam anekadhā ||
apabhraṃças tu yac chuddhaṃ tat taddeçeshu bhāshitam |
yad bhūtair ucyate kiṃcit tad bhautikam iti smṛitam ||

On defects in poetry,

P. iii. begins: adoshāv api çabdārthau praçasyet (e) na yair vinā | tānī 'dānīṃ yathāçakti brūmo 'bhivyaktaye guṇān ||

As far as I can judge from this fragment, this treatise bears a striking likeness to Daṇḍin's Kāvyādarça. Though most of the examples are in praise of Jina, who is said to be worshipped by Indra, yet the author mentions also Vināyaka, Lambodara, and Sarasvatī. The Oxford MS. has five pp.

XXVI. वामनसूत्रवृत्तिः Vāmanasūtravṛitti, a C. by Vāmanācārya on his own sūtras, which treat of the art of poetry. The work is also called Kāvyālaṅkāravṛitti. An elaborate analysis of its five adhikaraṇa is given in Aufrecht, Cat. p. 206. ffg., and the text has since been edited by Professor Cappeller, Jena, 1875. This work appears to be the source of some of the Dravidian works on this topic.

(10,558) Gr. ll. 31 (numbered 88, etc.). The sūtras and vṛitti complete. A little worm-eaten and injured. c. 1700.

(10,546) a. Te. ll. 1—61. Do. Written about 1750. Worm-eaten.

a. Kāvyālaṅkārakāmadhenu, a C. on the last by Gopīndra Tippa-bhūpāla, who (to judge by his name) must have been a Telugu. Begins:

kalyāṇi karotu nas sa bhagavān kṛīdāvarākritir, etc. It seems of no value, and is very diffusive.

[1] Mentioned also in ii. 11.

(10,546) b. Te. ll. 62—195. The first 3 ll. are from another MS., and are not inked; they are numbered 1—3. Half of l. 192 is lost.

XXVII. व्यक्तिविवेकः Vyaktiviveka, a treatise on Alaṅkāra by Rājānaka-Mahimādārya. Begins:

anumānāntam . . . sarvasyai 'va dhvaneḥ prakāçayitum|
vyaktivivekam kuruta praṇamya mahimāparāṃ vācam ||

About 3,000 granthas.

(10,524) Gr. ll. 129. c. 1750.

(10,525) Gr. ll. 68. c. 1700. In a very small hand. A little injured, and half of l. 54 is lost.

XXVIII. शब्दभेदनिरूपणम् Çabdabhedanirūpaṇa, a few brief notes and extracts on the art of poetry, etc., by Rāmacandra-dīxita and Nārāyaṇa çāstrin, who appear to have lived at the beginning of the century.

(10,523) Gr. Mostly loose leaves.

XXIX. शब्दार्थचिंतामणिः Çabdārthacintāmaṇi, a treatise on Alaṅkāra, a text in verse, and a C. (called Nikashopala), both by Cidaṃbara kavi, son of Anantanārāyaṇa, and grandson of Kauçika-Sūryanārāyaṇa-dīxita. 2 sargas. About 1,500 gr. Evidently a work composed in the last or the preceding century. Begins:

kalyāṇaṃ vaḥ kalayatu mahāpadmavaxomukundaḥ.

(5,082) D. ff. 126.

XXX. सरस्वतीकंठाभरणम् Sarasvatīkaṇṭhābharaṇa, a treatise on the art of poetry, with examples from different authors, attributed to Bhoja. An analysis, with a list of the authors whose works are quoted, is given in Aufrecht, Cat. pp. 208—9. About 6,000 gr.

(5,375) D. ff. 335.

XXXI. साहित्यचिंतामणिः Sāhityacintāmaṇi, a treatise on Alaṅkāra by Vīranārāyaṇa. Begins:

athe'dānīṃ granthakāra(ḥ) svagranthaprayojanasiddhaye; etc. ? a Commentary.

(10,514) Gr. ll. 197. c. 1700. Wants the end; lacunæ.

(10,515) Te. ll. 2—139. Wants beginning and l. 5. Breaks off abruptly in p. 10. c. 1750.

XXXII. साहित्यदर्पणः Sāhityadarpaṇa, by Viçvanātha. This has been edited in the B. I., and partly translated (in the same series) by the late Dr. Ballantyne.

(5,329) D. ff. 73. Recent.

XXXIII. साहित्यमीमांसा Sāhityamīmāṃsā, a brief text (in verse) with a vṛitti; 8 prakaraṇas. The author's name does not appear. Begins:

nidānaṃ jagatāṃ vande vastuni vācyavācare |
yayoḥ sāhityavaicitryā satāṃ rasavibhūtayā || etc.

(10,518) Te. ll. 20. c. 1750.

XXXIV. साहित्यरत्नाकरः Sāhityaratnākara, examples illustrating the rules of poetry in 10 sargas. This work is called a Mahākāvya, but there does not appear to be any continuous story in it.

(10,291) Gr. ll. 197. Broken.

(10,290) Te. ll. 101. 31 is repeated, and ll. 62—5 are missing; lacunæ.

b. Kāmaçāstra.

This subject is rather to be classed under Vaidyaçāstra, but, in accordance with the usual practice, I put it here. European writers seem to have left unnoticed the fanciful physiological theories which form the foundation of these books.

XXXV. अनंगरंगः Anaṅgaraṅga, composed by one Kalyāṇamalla, for the amusement of Lādha khān, of the Lodi family. 10 sthala; gr. 610. An account of this miserable and pedantic book is to be found in Aufrecht, Cat. p. 218*a*.

XXXVI. रतिरहस्यम् Ratirahasya, written by Kokkoka[1] for one Vaiṇyadatta. This shameless book is a great favourite in S. India, and there are several vernacular versions of it. The one in Tamil has been printed (in spite of the police). 10 paricchedas. About 846 çl. Begins:

yenā 'kāri prasatham acirād ardhanārīçvaratvaṃ
dagdhenā 'pi tripurajayino jyotishā cāxusheṇa | indor mitraṃ sa jayati mudāṃ dhāma vāmapracāro
devaḥ çrīmān bhavarasabhujāṃ daivataṃ cittajanmā ||

The author (i. v. 8) professes to give, first, the worthy opinions of Nandikeçvara and Goṇikāputra, as they are the oldest writers on the subject, and then Vātsyāyana's. The first p. contains a description of the 4 classes of women—padminī, citriṇī, çaṅkhinī, and hastinī.

P. ii. begins: athe 'dānīṃ sarvajātisādhāraṇacandrakalā nirūpyate. P. iii. begins: "uddhṛitasāraṃ nandikeçvaragoṇikāputrayor matam | athe 'dānīṃ vātsyāyanīyaṃ nirūpyate," | and is a continuation of the same subject.

P. iv. contains the Sāmānyadharma, and begins: Bānā syāt shoḍaçābdāt, tadupari taruṇī; triṃçataṃ yāvad ūrdhva(ṃ) prauḍhā syāt; pañcāçadavadhiparato vṛiddhatām eti nārī |

P. v. begins: "Prāyo'ṅganānām pura eva tripter bhāvāvasānaṃ purushā labhante" | and contains āliṅgana-cuṃbana, nakhaxata, and dantaxata-adhikāras, which seem to be elaborated from a careful consideration of the amours of the feline race.

P. vi. begins: "vilasadamaladīpe pushpadāmāvakīrne prasṛitasurabhidhūpe dhāmni kāmī suveshaḥ," and contains kṛitrimāliṅga, etc., adhikāras.

P. vii. begins: "Triguṇaṃ avikalārthaṃ sādhayan sādhulokaḥ," and treats of kanyāviçraṃbhana.

P. viii. begins: "Yuvatir api vihāya prātilomyaṃ svanāthe," and contains the bhāryādhikāra.

P. ix. begins: "Bhāryādhikārikam idaṃ gaditaṃ samāsād vaxyāmi saṃprati parapramadābhiyogaṃ," | and contains the Pāradārikādhikāra.

P. x. begins: "dṛishṭvā 'nekavidhāni manmathakalāçāstrāṇi," and contains 'vaçīkaraṇa drāvaṇa, sections which form the vājīkaraṇādhikāra. The remaining sections are called vīryastaṃbhana, liṅgavṛiddhiprakaraṇa, bhāgadoshasaṃkocanikāsavidhi, lomaçātanavidhi, garbhapātanavidhi, garbhadhāraṇavidhi, sukhaprasavavidhi, yoniçūladurgandhāpanayavidhi, and gātravāsanavidhi; they form the yogādhikāra, and contain a great many magical formulæ apparently copied from Tantras.

The last section may be of some interest, in parts, as regards Indian Medical Jurisprudence.

There were formerly in the Tanjore Palace a large number of pictures to illustrate this and similar books, but they have nearly all been destroyed.

i.e. Music, including chanting, dancing, etc., and all that constitutes the Indian ballet.

The books on this subject here contain nothing new; the MSS. are mostly imperfect and very incorrect, and as several works on this subject have been edited at Calcutta, these MSS. are of no importance.

VI. Çilpaçāstra.

All the works in this collection are in a desperately bad condition; most of those in the Nāgarī character have been transcribed from palm-leaf MSS. from the South of India, and these appear to have consisted of text, and Tamil translation intermixed, as in many MSS. actually in the Library. They thus present exceedingly incorrect and imperfect texts in many places, and in some cases Tamil words have been inserted and transliterated into Nāgarī. Most of the treatises here are (it is asserted) taken out of Āgamas or Tantras current in South India, and it may, therefore, be doubted if they contain much that is either old or very important. For this reason, also, there is much in these treatises that has reference to other subjects, e.g. ritual and astrology. The Oriental Translation Society's publication, "Architecture of the Hindus," by Ram Raz (4to. 1834), contains a good deal of their contents. The practical rules given in these treatises for constructing temples, palaces, etc., seem to be in use only in South India. They are conventional to the last degree, and it is difficult to believe that the architects of the South Indian temples had nothing better. The latest remarks on these treatises are in Lassen, I. A. K. iv. p. 877 and ffg.

1. शिल्पशास्त्रम् Çilpaçāstra, attributed to Viçvakarman, the artificer of the gods. In fasc. iv. (pp. 276–7) of Dr. Bühler's Catalogue of MSS. from Gujarat, there is an aparājita-vāstuçāstram, by Viçvakarmā, on 24 ff., with 15 lines to a page, and thus much the same size as this work. The title of this work is improbable, but no other appears in the MSS.

(3,653) D. ff. 66. About 9 lines to a page. In all, 1,200 granthas. Many lacunæ, recent, and imperfect.
(11,070) Gr. ll. 141.
(11,071) ll. 55. With Tamil commentary.
(11,072) Gr. ll. 3—56. Rathalaxaṇa. Wants the beginning.

This work begins (3,653):

The chief topics are: manushyadehaparimāṇa, sthāpatiçilpa, pratishṭhāvidhāna, vedinirmāṇa, pratimāparimāṇa, rathanirmāṇa, rathapratishṭhā, varadābhayahastādilaxaṇa, svarṇaçaṅkhalaxaṇa, yajñopavītādilaxaṇa, svarṇasaṅgrahaprakāra, grahamakhadevatāprakāra, kirīṭalaxaṇa, bhūshaṇalaxaṇa, jīrṇoddhāra (i.e. repairs of dilapidated temples and images), dvāranirmāṇa.

2. मयशिल्पम् Mayaçilpa, or Artisan's Manual, by Maya.

(3,654) D. ff. 54. 16 lines to a page. Total, about 3,000 granthas. A recent transcript, with many lacunæ, and injured in parts.

(11,066) Gr. and Tamil, ll. 283. The original of the last, copied about 1650, and much injured. The title, according to this MS., is "Vastuçāstra."

(11,067) Gr. and Tamil, ll. 122. Sections —21.

The first chapter gives the contents:

A prose paraphrase of part follows, and concludes the first chapter. The above copies contain only the first 25 chapters, or, perhaps, two-thirds of the whole.

3. मानवसारम् Mānavasāra. The name of this treatise is doubtful, as in some places it is given as Mānasāra. An extract (s.v. abhisheka) has been given by Dr. Goldstücker in his dictionary.

(3,656) D. 65 ff. With 8 lines to a page; containing altogether about 1,000 gr.; lacunæ. A recent transcript. adhyāyas 35—47.

The first chapter (35) begins:

4. मूलस्तभनिर्णयः Mūlastambhanirṇaya. This appears to consist of a dialogue between Īçvara and Shaṇmukha, full of mysticism, and intended to show that there are really five vedas, viz. one for each of the five classes of artisans, (the five classes of artisans appear to be known in many rude civilizations, e.g. in W. Africa, see Burton's "Abbeokuta," vol. i. p. 160), and that the Brahminical vedas are not the real vedas.

VII. Vaidyaçāstra a. 1. Original saṃhitās to which a divine origin is ascribed.

I. 1. आयुर्वेदः Āyurveda, by Suçruta. Translated into Latin (after a fashion) by Hessler (Erlangen, 1844), and edited at Calcutta, in 2 vols. 8vo., 1835–6, and reprinted at the same place in 1868, in 4 vols. 8vo.

(5,379) D. ff. 71. Sūtrasthāna (i.). The beginning only of a recent and careless transcript.
(5,380) D. ff. 57. Çarīrasthāna (ii.). A recent S. Indian transcript.
(5,381) D. ff. 100—108. The last 7 chapters of the Uttaratantra (vi.). A good N. Indian MS.

a. Nibandhasaṅgraha, by Çrī-Ḍalvaṇa (sic?). This is the same C. as that mentioned by Aufrecht (p. 303, No. 740). Begins:

hetulaxaṇapratipādikāṇ nidānasthānād adhigatavyādhihetulaxaṇasya vaidyasya cikitsāyāḥ avasaraḥ. cikitsā ca adhishṭhānaviçeshajñānam antareṇa na saṃbhavatī 'ty adhishṭhānajñāpanāya çarīrasthānam ārabhyate | çarīrasthāne 'pi pratipādye ādau sarvaçarīrakakāraṇānāṃ bhūtānām eva cintāṃ karttuṃ yujyata ity āha: 'athā'tas' (etc.) | sarvāṇi bhūtāni sthāvirajaṅgamāni mahābhūtāni pṛithivyādīni vā teshā(ṃ) cintāhetusvalaxaṇakāryaiç cintanam |
(10,767) Gr. ll. 181. Written within the last 20 years, but is not inked, and a blunt style having been used by the copyist, is almost illegible in parts, but is evidently a correct MS. Contains the Çarīrasthāna complete. About 3,240 gr. This MS. is strangely labelled as part of an original work by Bilhaṇa.[1]

2. आयुर्वेदः Āyurveda, a sūtra-like treatise in prose. The incomplete MSS. in the library divide the work into panna (sic? praçna). P. i. begins:

adhāto (athā'to) dhātusthadoshagatyavikāraheṭubhūtārthavārdhikadravyāṇy adyāt cirāyur . . . . pravittiḥ | āyurvedārthapurushārthopapādikā | taddhetuṃ bhūtārthaṃ raxet | ne 'daṃ yāti lolanātipīḍanau |
(5,541) D. ff. 13. Breaks off abruptly in p. 3. A recent and very incorrect transcript.
(10,736) Te. ll. 28. A recent and clearly written, though incorrect, MS. Breaks off in p. 10.

II. भेलसंहिता Bhelasaṃhitā. According to the Carakasaṃhitā (a. i. 29[2]) this is one of the 6 saṃhitā of the Āyurveda, and as this MS. seems to be unique, though it is very defective, a minute description is necessary.

(10,773) Te. ll. 203. Written about 1650, and apparently copied from an injured ōlai MS. It is in a large and clear hand. 3,250 gr.
Begins in adhyāya 4 of the —— ? sthāna.

[1] Ḍalvaṇa may be a mistake for Bilhaṇa, but it would not be safe, on account of its uncouth form and want of meaning, to infer that it is a mistake. There are countless names still in use in the Telugu country quite as strange.

a. ? (l. 193*b*). atha phalamūtrasiddhiṃ v.

Just before this the 8th chapter is said to end. From this to the end there are no more divisions, and the MS. is full of lacunæ. It is evident that this MS. contains nearly all the Bhelasaṃhitā, though with, in parts, so many lacunæ as to make it difficult to make anything of the text; probably, also, some chapters are misplaced; but as the MS. is carelessly copied, it would need a very close examination to put it in order. The most superficial comparison shows how much Vāgbhaṭa was indebted to this ancient work. The repeated mention of Gandhāra and the neighbouring countries suggests that it was composed thereabouts, and therefore probably under Greek influences; but I have no means within reach, unfortunately, of comparing the classification of diseases and their treatment, according to Bhela, with that of the Greeks.

In considering this question, it must be remarked that the older treatises show a totally different theory of the cause of disease to that taught by the rest of Sanskrit literature, and especially by the religious systems and law-books, viz. that nearly all disease is the result of supernatural influences, and of sinful actions in some stages of the patient's existence. To this view the later treatises incline, so that there has been a falling off rather than a progress in Indian medicine. On the general question of the age and authenticity of the Sanskrit medical treatises, see a paper (by Dr. Haas) in Z. d. D. M. G. vol. xxx.

vaidyagrantha vāgbhaṭe saṅgraho likhyate | harītakīguṇaḥ | . . .

A sort of very brief summary of Vāgbhaṭa's work in not always correct Sanskrit

(5,389) D. ff. 33. Ends abruptly in a. 15 of the Uttarasthāna. A S. Indian MS. 650 gr.

I am not aware that any part of the aṣhṭāṅgahṛidaya has been printed except i. 1—8 printed in the Malayālam character, and with an exceedingly diffuse C. in that language (Calicut Govt. Press, 1863, 8vo. pp. 1, 3, 169). The compiler states that he has followed the Sarvvāṅgasundarī, Bālaprabodhikā and Hṛidayabodhikā, all CC. on the text, and of which I have seen more or less complete copies. There is another C. called Pāthya (?), of which I have only seen the first few chapters. In Malabar there are 8 Nambūri Brahmans, of considerable wealth, but not of very high rank, who are called Aṣhṭavaidyar, and who are the hereditary physicians of Malabar. They are very reserved, but as far as I could ascertain, when in Malabar, they have nothing but the Aṣhṭāṅgahṛidaya and its CC. to go by. They denied the existence there of any āyurveda but this, and seemed ignorant of the Caraka and Suçruta saṃhitās. The Aṣhṭāṅgahṛidaya has an immense reputation on the W. Coast, and is the subject of a Malayālam proverb.—See Gundert's Malayālam Dictionary, p. 64*b*. Among Sanskrit treatises on Medicine it certainly well deserves its fame; but at present it is used (in S. India) in Malabar only.

V. आयुर्वेदमहोदधिः Āyurvedamahodadhi, by Çrīsukha.

(5,435) D. ff. 46. This is a recent S. Indian MS. and begins in the 5th verse of the pānīyavarga, and contains 26 short vargas which treat of the properties of articles of food, etc. Ends with a vastra-varga. Is much like the Pākaçāstra (see below p. 73), but appears to be part of a large digest. About 1,000 gr.

VI. आरोग्यचिंतामणिः Ārogyacintāmaṇi, by Dāmodara, son of Bhaṭṭa Vishṇu, and perhaps the father of the author of the Çārṅgadharasaṃhitā (see below, p. 66). Begins:

ārogyaṃ bhayapīḍita . . . nṛiṇāṃ yaccintanāj jāyate taṃ sargādividhāyinaṃ suranutaṃ natvā çivaṃ çāsvataṃ | āyurvedamahodadher laghutaraṃ sarvārthaṃ suprabhaṃ vaxye 'haṃ carakādisūktanicayair ārogyacintāmaṇiṃ ‖ 1 ‖

(5,436) D. ff. 59. A recent S. Indian MS.

Doshādikajñānādhyāya (1)—f. 1; annapānādhyāya (2)—3*b*; dravyaguṇādhyāya (3)—8*b*; snehasvedanādhyāya (4)—11; pañcakarmā° (5)—11*b*; dhūmagaṇḍhūshakavalā° (6)—14*b*; arishṭā° (7)—16; jvarā° (8)—17; atisāragrahaṇīkṛiminivāraṇā° (9)—21*b*; arçorogā° (10)—24; agnimāndyajīrṇabheda° (11)—26; raktapittapradā° (12)—27; pramehamūtrakṛicchrā° (13)—28; xayarogā° (14)—29*b*; kāsaçvāsahikkā° (15)—31; svarabhaṅgārocakā° (16)—32*b*; chardiṭrishṇāmūrcchā° (17)—33*b*; pāṇḍukāmalāhalīmakā° (18)—34; vidradhigulmā° (19)—35; udarā° (20)—36*b*; udāvarttaçūlahṛidrogāmlāpittā. (21)—38; vātarogā° (22)—39*b*; kushṭaçvitrodardaçegā° (23)—42*b*; visarpaçophaçlīpadasthaulyarogā° (24)—45. These chapters are said to comprise the nidāna and kāyacikitsāsthānas. Çālākyaṃ tantraṃ (25)—46*b*; çalyaṃ tantram (26)—50; vishādhyāya (27)—53*b*; unmādāpasmārā° (28)—55; rasāyanakaraṇā° (29)—55*b*; sūtikābālarogā° (30)—56*b*. On f. 58*b*, begins the Uttarasthāna said to be the sixth which finishes the book.

VII. संनिपातचंद्रिका Saṃnipātacandrikā, an anonymous treatise on a goodly number of disorders (generally said to be 13[1]) caused by a combined disorder of three humours; their symptoms and cure. Begins:

amlasnigdhoshṇatīxṇaiḥ kaṭumadhurasasurātāpasevākashāyaiḥ | kāmakrodhāriruddhair gurutarapiçitāhārasauhityaçitaiḥ ‖ çokavyāyāmacintāgrahaganavanitātyantasaṅgaprabhāvaiḥ prāyaḥ kupyanti. puṃsāṃ madhusamayaçaradvarshaneśannipātāḥ ‖ 1 ‖

(5,448) D. ff. 19. A recent S. Indian MS. The text is in the middle of the page, and a C. (also anonymous) above and below.

VIII. कल्याणकारकः Kalyāṇakāraka, by "Ugrādityācārya," a Jain. Begins:

Çrīmatsurāsuranarendrakirīṭakoṭimāṇikyaraçminiçārārcitapādapīṭha°. For the most part in çlokas and evidently based on the saṃhitās.

(10,766) Te. ll. 127. Breaks off in pariccheda 23 of the Cikitsāsthāna. At the end are a few ll. containing fragments of earlier chapters. Many lacunæ at the end. Gr. 3,500.

IX. भावप्रकाशः Bhāvaprakāça, by Bhāvamiçra, son of Miçra-Laṭaka. About 20,000 gr. vi. (?) prakaraṇas. Begins:

gajomukham amarapravaraṃ siddhikaraṃ vighnahartāraṃ | gurum avagamanayanapradaṃ iṣṭakarīm iṣṭadevatāṃ vande ‖

In the introduction there is an account of Indian Medical Science which is partly historical; it has been printed by Aufrecht (i. p. 309 ffg.). This immense compilation is in many ways a step in advance of the older Hindu treatises, and very decidedly against received Hindu notions in many ways; e.g. the author was aware of the hereditary transmission of disease in some cases (p. 14*b*):

dampatyoḥ kushṭabāhulyād dushṭaçonitaçukrayoḥ | yad apatyaṃ tayor jātaṃ jñeyaṃ tad api kushṭitam ‖

Again, his signs of a sound constitution are quite free from the usual fanciful nonsense (p. 82):

saumyā dṛishṭir bhaved yasya çrotraṃ vaktraṃ tathai 'va ca | svādugandhaṃ vijānāti, sa sādhyo nā 'tra saṃçayaḥ ‖ pāṇipādau ca yasyo 'shṇau dāhaḥ svalpataro bhavet | jihvā sukomalā yasya sa rogī na vinaçyati ‖ svedahīno jvaro yasya çvāso nāsikayā saret | kaṇṭhaç ca kaphahīnaḥ syāt sa rogī jīvati dhruvam ‖ yasya nidrā sukhena syāt çarīraṃ sodyamaṃ bhavet | indriyāṇi prasannāni sa rogī nai 'va naçyati ‖

But with this there is also a vast deal of rubbish of the usual character;

e.g.—yugmāsu putrā jāyante striyo 'yugmāsu rātrishu ‖ or—pitros tu svalpabījatvād āsekyaḥ purusho bhavet | sa çukraṃ prāçya labhate dhvajonnatim asaṃçayam ‖

'pitror'—mātāpitroḥ svalpabījatvāt . . . sa çukraṃ prāçye 'ti sa purusho (i.e. çukraḥ yaḥ) 'nyapurusheṇa svamukhe maithunaṃ kārayitvā tasya çukraṃ prāçya mehanotthānaṃ labhata ity arthaḥ. A truly homœopathic prescription and worthy of our European practitioners in that line! There can be little doubt that the compiler, in addition to the Sanskrit works he admits having used, has also largely profited by the treatises of Mohammedan (Arabic) physicians. A full analysis is given by Aufrecht (l.c.).

This work seems to be the chief authority among the Mahrattas. Other MSS. are described by Westergaard, Cat. p. 104. Notices, i. pp. 96—7.

(5,395) D. ff. 863.

(5,396) D. ff. 633. A recent careful transcript on European paper.

(5,397) D. ff. 617. A N. Indian MS. written at Benares, Saṃv. 1848. Ends with rasāyanavidhi, and is, therefore, complete. The original of the two preceding MSS.

(5,398) D. ff. 217 and 247. Written (? at Benares), Saṃv. 1889.

(5,399) D. Fragments of a recent transcript.

X. ऋग्विनिश्चयः Ṛugviniçcaya, by Mādhava. On the cause of diseases, and on their diagnosis. Begins:

praṇamya jagadutpattisthitisaṃhārakāraṇaṃ| svargāpavargayor dvāraṃ trailokyaçaraṇaṃ çivam ‖ nānāmunīnāṃ vacanair idānīṃ samāsataḥ sadbhishajaṃ niyogāt | sopadravāriṣṭanidānalingo nibodhyate roganiçcayo 'yaṃ ‖

This has been printed at Calcutta. See Aufrecht (i. 357*b*), who has also (i. p. 312) given the headings to the chapters.

(1) D. ff. 110. Written about 50 years ago; a few lacunæ. 22 is repeated.

(5,401) D. ff. 67, and anukr. ff. 3.

(12,324) D. ff. 79. Recent.

XI. शार्ङ्गधरसंहिता Çārṅgadharasaṃhitā, a practical treatise on medicine, by Çārṅgadhara, son of Dāmodara, in thirty-two chapters. This has been several times printed at Bombay, Benares, and Calcutta. In Aufrecht (p. 315), the contents are briefly given. About 2,400 gr.

(5,433) D. ff. 68. Complete, in a Canarese hand of about 1750.

(5,434) D. ff. 12. Breaks off in the chapter on eye diseases, the last, of which about a f. is missing.

(10,784) Gr. ll. 36. About the first half. Recent.

(10,785) Gr. ll. 179. Prescriptions from the ç.-s., with a ṭīkā.

XII. वैद्यजीवनः Vaidyajīvana, a treatise on medicines, by Lolimbarāja. Of this tract Aufrecht (p. 317) says: morborum principalium remedia ita proposuit, ut versibus singulis mulierem amatam compellaret. Quod ingenii egestate, non ubertate, et poetarum inferiorum imitatione factum esse, harum rerum gnaros non latebit, idem metra artificiciosa adhibuit. Begins:

prakṛitisubhagagātraṃ prītipātraṃ ramāyāḥ, etc. For the rest, see Aufrecht, l.c. Gr. 365.

(5,418) D. ff. Complete in 5 vilāsa. A few lacunæ. Recent.

(5,421) D. ff. 25.

[1] In another treatise on the same subject (Aufrecht, p. 319) they are said to be 14, but the list in the above work is the same as in çl. 3—4 in the Oxford treatise, except that Vikhyāto is read for Hārīdro and trayodaça for caturdaça.

XIII. वैद्यावतंसः Vaidyāvataṃsa, a brief description of the properties of articles of food, commencing with fruits and ending with meats and preparations of milk, by Lolimbarāja. Begins:

anukṛitāmarakatavarṇāçobhitakarṇā kadaṃbakusumenā |
nakhamukhamukharitavīṇā madhye xīṇā çivā çivaṃ kuryād vaḥ | 1 ||
hutavahahutajaṅghājānumāṃsaprabhāvād adhigatagirikanyāstanyapīyūshapānaḥ |
racayati carakādiṃ vīxya vaidyāvataṃsaṃ kavikulasulatāno lāliloliṃbarājaḥ || 2 ||
yat prasiddhaṃ iha vartate phalaṃ çākam anyad api tannirūpyate |
aprasiddhakathanaṃ hi niḥphalaṃ granthavistarabhayān na likhyate || 3

The author then describes grapes, mangos, etc.

drākṣā sākṣāt sudhātāvan madhurā rasapākayoḥ |
çrishṭamūtrā çakṛidgurvī snigdhā çukrakarī himā || 4 ||

100 granthas.

(5,402) D. ff. 11. Recent. The abstract (in red) is mostly in Mahratta.

(5, 405) D. ff. 5. Last l. torn.

(5,406) D. ff. 2. A fragment of do.

XIV. शतश्लोकी Çataçlokī, a treatise containing approved prescriptions for several common disorders, beginning with fevers, and ending with the stings of venomous insects. Anonymous. Begins:

çataçlokī | jvarāṇāṃ | mustāparpaṭadhanvayāsadhanikābhūnimbaº.

Ends: imaṃ samastarogāṇāṃ praçastaushadhasaṅgrahaṃ |
akārshʻīd bālabodhārtham . . . adadhānī sarasvatī |
imaṃ çatena çlokānāṃ shaḍviṃçatisupeyushā |
nibuddham aṅgīkurvanti santo bheshajasaṅgraham ||

(5,442) D. ff. 16. A recent S. Indian transcript; much corrected.

(10,725) Te. ll. 21. Injured.

XV. शतश्लोकीचंद्रकला Çataçlokīcandrakalā, a brief account of the way of composing powders, pills, etc., by Vopadeva, son of Keçava. This is accompanied by the author's ṭīkā, in which the text is explained in simple language. Begins:

āyurvedavidāṃ devam āvurārogyadaṃ raviṃ |
natvā nijaçataçlokīṃ vyākhyāmi bhishajāṃ mude ||

Bhaishajyadvijaº, etc. (See Aufrecht, p. 319*a*.).

It looks as if Çataçlokī were properly the name of the text, and Candrakalā that of the commentary; but in some MSS. the C. is called Kṛidayaprabodha.

(5,444) D. ff. 102. Gr. 1,000. Ends: kvāthādhikāraḥ shashṭhaḥ. A recent S. Indian transcript, and very incorrect.

(5,446) D. ff 67. Wants beginning and end. Much worn. Contains part of the ṭīkā.

(10,727) Gr. ll. 64.

(10,728) Gr. ll. 62.

The first MS. may be independent, but all end in the same place.

a. Bhāvārthadīpikā, by Veṇidatta. Begins:

vāsudēvasamudbhūtabhāgyabhṛidbhogisūnunā |
çataçlokīvivaraṇaṃ veṇīdattena likhyate || granthāvighnaparisamāptyarthaṃ Bopadevakavir granthādau maṅgalam ācarati | Bhaishajye 'ti |

(5,445) D. ff. 23. Written in a small hand and not always correct. 6 adhikāra; about 550 granthas.

XVI. योगशतकम् Yogaçataka, a number of old wives' prescriptions for different diseases, attributed to a Vararuci. 114 trishṭubh, etc., stanzas. By the remarks in Aufrecht, p. 316*b*. (No. 752) and note 2, it appears that this has been worked up again by an anonymous author, and that there are two CC. on the original text in the I. O. Library. Begins:

kṛitsnasya tantrasya gṛihītadhāmnaḥ (ºā)
cikitsitārthaprasṛitasya dūram | vidagdhavaidyapratipūjitasya karishyate yogaçatasya bandhaḥ || 1 ||
parīxya hetvāmayalaxaṇāni
cikitsitajñena cikitsakena |

kṛitaḥ kashāyaḥ kaphamāruttottare | saçvāsakāsārucipārçvarukkare
jvare tridoshaprabhave 'pi çāsyate || 5 ||

The sections are: jvaracikitsā, netrarogaprakaraṇa, vishatantra, bālatantra, vamana, and virecana. It is obvious that several names of divisions have been omitted by copyists in the early part of the book. Ends: kāñjikamūtradagdhasahito vātāmayebhyo hitaḥ || 114 ||

To prevent any reasonable doubt as to the efficacy of his prescriptions, the author indulges in a good deal of assertion, e.g. (17):

ajamodāmocarasaṃ bhṛiṅgaberaṃ sadhātakīkusumaṃ |
gomathitena saṃprayuktaṃ gaṅgām api vāhinīṃ rundhyāt ||

This is intended for atisāra (dysentery)!

(5,425) D. ff. 12.

(5,426) D. ff. 11.

(5,427) D. ff. 11. On the fly-leaf are some extracts from a sāṅkhya work. All recent. c. 1800.

XVII. धन्वंतरिसारनिधिः Dhanvantarisāranidhi, attributed to Veda-Vyāsa in the introduction, but in the colophon of each chapter it is said to have been composed by Tulaji (Rājā of Tanjore). It begins:

vaidyaçāstramāhātmyaṃ jñātukāmair munīçvaraiḥ |
saṃpṛishṭo bhagavān devavyāsas tān idam abravīt || çṛiṇvantu munayaḥ sarve 'py upavedavyāsthitaṃ |

dharmārthakāmamoxāṇām ārogyaṃ kila sādhanaṃ |
āyurvedas tad adhyeyo dehinā 'rogyakāṅxiṇā ||

After several çlokas which state that this is a very holy and secret book; and describing the proper persons to study it, the sūtrasthāna begins (1, b):

atha çarīrasthānaṃ prathamaṃ tāvan nirūpyate |
sūtrādisthānānāṃ sarveshām upajīvyaṃ yat |

mano buddhir ahaṃkāro bhūtānām api pañcakam |
evam ashṭavidhaṃ rūpaṃ vadanty anye manīshiṇaḥ ||

(5,440) D. ff. 246. Many ff. missing; ends abruptly with a section on rasacikitsā. A S. Indian MS. c. 1750. As there are many errors, and even lacunæ, and considering the general nature of the work, it is probable that this is (in part, at least) the Vyāsasaṃhitā occasionally referred to in Sanskrit medical works, but worked over by order of Rājā Tulaji.

(5,438) D. ff. 105. ff. 8 and 97 are missing. Not finished.

(5,439) D. Fragments.

These two MSS. bear the same name as No. 5,438, but are extracts and compilations, and differ entirely from it. They are evidently the compiler's rough copies, and never finished.

XVIII. पदार्थचंद्रिका Padārthacandrikā, a ṭīkā to some general treatise on medicine. It is also called (in the colophon to a. i.) Hemādriṭīkā and Āyurvedarasāyana. Begins:

praṇamya devadeveçaṃ hariṃ vāgnidhim axaraṃ |
padārthacandrikāṃ ṭīkāṃ çubhāṃ sarvahitāvahāṃ ||
çrima . . . devena prerito hṛidaye sphuṭam |
budhyā . . . karishyāmi guroḥ saṃsmṛitya caraṇaṃ ||

The beginning of the text is: rāgādirogān satatānushaktān açeshakāya prasṛitān açeshān | etc.

(5,441) D. ff. 189. A North Indian MS. of about 1650. Ends abruptly in Jīmūtakalpa. About 6,000 gr. A saṅgraha is frequently quoted.

XIX. रोगनिर्णय: Roganirṇaya, a modern compilation on medicine. The author's name does not appear.

(5,449) D. ff. 191. Unfinished.

XX. धन्वंतरिविलास: Dhanvantarivilāsa, an unfinished treatise on medicine, composed under the direction of some Tanjore prince of the last century.

(5,458) D. ff. 52. A rough copy; wants the end.

XXI. चिकित्सामृतसागर: Cikitsāmṛitasāgara, a treatise on medicine, by Paṇḍita-Devadāsa. A modern compilation. Begins:

jvaro' tisāro grahaṇī arço jīrṇavishūcikā |

(5,416) D. ff. 249. A N. Indian MS., written about 1700. Several ff. have been supplied in a S. Indian hand. Begins as above, but this is probably not the real commencement.

(5,417) D. ff. 105. A recent S. Indian transcript.

(5,453) D. ff. 173. Do.

XXII. चिकित्सासारसंग्रह: Cikitsāsārasaṅgraha, a treatise on medicine, by Vaṅgaseṇa, son of Gadādhara. About 13,000 gr. Begins:

natvā girīçam apahāya vacaḥ prapañcam
vriddhān upāsya bhishajas tadudāhṛitīç ca | etc.

(5,428) D. ff. 489, of which ff. 397—415 are wanting. Written in N. India, Saṃv. 1709. The last 6 ff. are injured at the tops. Ends: Rishṭādhyāyaḥ, and is said to be complete.

(5,454) D. ff. 491. A recent N. Indian MS. Ends: Dravyasya bhāvābhāvau. ff. 448—457 are wanting.

These two MSS. contain much the same matter, but the difference in arrangement, and even in the text, is in parts very considerable.

(10,729) Te. ll. 243. Written about 1750. Defective in the beginning.

(10,730) Te. ll. 371. A fine MS. written about 1700. Ends: visphoṭanidānacikitsā.

XXIII. सारसंग्रह: Sārasaṅgraha, a manual of the art of medicine, based on the saṃhitās. The author's name is not given at the end of the adhyāyas, but only the name of the work.

(10,700) Gr. ll. 36. Written about 1650. a. 5—17 (in which the MS. breaks off abruptly) of the Nidānasthāna.

XXIV. भेषजसर्वस्वम् Bheshajasarvasva, a compilation of extracts from the Cikitsāsthāna of the Ashṭāṅgahṛidaya and similar works, with diffuse Tamil C. The author's name is not given.

(10,757) Gr. ll. 140. Recent.

XXV. कौपालिकग्रंथ: Kaupālikagrantha, a treatise on diseases of the eyes, their diagnosis and cure, by Kaupālika (? Kāpālika). Gr. 300. Begins:

kṛishṇe pañca na navai 'va sandhishu
daça trīṇy atra çukle 'khile | jātāç çoḍaça (sic!) vartmajāḥ khalu
caturviṃço dṛiçor viṃçatiḥ |

(10,792) Te. ll. 25. A few lacunæ.

XXVI. चिंतामणि: Cintāmaṇi, a treatise on medicine, by Vallabhendra, son of Bhaṭṭa-Amareçvara, a Telugu Brahman of the Āpastamba-kula. A well-known treatise, much used by Ainslie. It is in Sanskrit, with Telugu explanations. Begins:

çrīrāmaṃ sarvalokeçaṃ sītāsevyaṃ surāsuraiḥ |
sugrīvavāyuputrādyaiḥ sevyaṃ vande narottamaiḥ ||
çrīnāthaṃ pārvatīnāthaṃ vāṇīnāthaṃ sarasvatīṃ | etc.

(10,768) Te. ll. 162. With Telugu C. Exceedingly carelessly copied in a large hand about 1700. Ends with prescriptions for "kapharoginaḥ."

(10,769) Te. ll. 112. A similar MS. to the last.

(10,770) Te. ll. 336. Wants the beginning; ends with "biḍālavanaçuddhi."

(10,771*) Te. ll. 57. Beginning only. Not inked; written before 1700.

(10,772) a. Te. ll. 187. Ends abruptly. Written about 1700. Partly not inked. In this MS. various versions of some of the çlokas are given, and many corrections made. It is evident that all the MSS. were copied by persons entirely ignorant of Sanskrit, and the owners probably used only the Telugu version and Commentary.

The Sanskrit in this work, originally bad, has been so altered by copyists that in many places it would be hard to understand the text without the aid of the Telugu C. The above extract is made from all the MSS. collated, and will show how bad they are.

What the original extent of the book was, there are no means here at Tanjore of deciding.

XXVII. चमत्कारचिंतामणिः Camatkāracintāmaṇi, a rather absurd work on the cure of diseases, beginning with fever and coughs, by some pedant whose name is not given. Begins:

līlāvati kalākalpavalli lāvaṇyapeçale |
bāle cañcalalocane suvadane te çailatulyau sthanau |
tulyam me kusumair vapuḥ dṛiḍhataram mā . . tvam āliṅga mām ||

(5,403) D. ff. 16. Wants the end; recent. Gr. 238.

XXVIII. राजमृगांकः Rājamṛigāṅka, a treatise on the preparation of medical powders (cūrṇa) and oils (taila). The author's name is not mentioned. Probably his name is here given as the name of the book.[1] About 880 gr.

(5,400) D. ff. 43. Ends—bhedaghnaṃ raktâpittaharaṃ paraṃ | Rājamṛigāṅkaṃ samāptaṃ (sic!). Recent.

XXIX. सारावलिः Sārāvali, a treatise on medicine. The author's name does not occur in this MS.

(10,782) Gr. ll. 2—311. Wants beginning and end. Tamil C. written about 1650. Much worm-eaten and broken.

XXX. पाकावली Pākāvalī. Begins:

nirnītaṃ kuçalair yuktāpākhyaçatakaṃ ca yat |
vaidyarājaprayatnena guhyaṃ raxa yaçāya vai ||

(10,781) Gr. ll. 39. Recent, and not inked.

XXXI. अशीतिवातनिदानम् Açītivātanidāna. The author's name is not mentioned. Begins:

aṅgulipādavātaṃ ca jānuvātam puras tathā |
kaṭivātaṃ medhra . . pārçvahṛikuxivātajaṃ ||

On rheumatism and similar disorders.

(10,794) Te. ll. 10. Written in a large hand about 1750. Gr. 200.

XXXII. श्लेष्मज्वरनिदानम् Çleshmajvaranidāna.

(5,430) D. ff. 15.

XXXIII. दोहदप्रकारः Dohadaprakāra. On pregnancy, etc. The author's name is not mentioned.

(5,461) D. ff. 4.

3. Vājīkaraṇa.

Indian medical books on this topic are much esteemed, and fully believed in. They are greater part of a very obscene character, and contain medico-magical prescriptions, not only to remove impotence, but also to gain prosperity, to injure other people in body and mind, to seduce women, and for similar purposes; also rules for juggling tricks. The usual vain speculations on the cause of difference of sex in children occupy a prominent place in these compilations.

[1] The author of the Sarvāṅgasundarī states that his father was Mṛigāṅka, v. p. 65.

XXXIV. कौतुकचिंतामणिः Kautukacintāmaṇi. A compilation of prescriptions, etc., in çlokas, with much praise of them.

(10,761) Te. ll. 90. Wants beginning and end.
(10,762) Gr. ll. 66. Do. Much broken.
(10,763) Gr. ll. 53. Do. Do.
(10,764) Te. ll. 52. Do. Half gnawed away by rats.
(10,765) Te. ll. 39. Do.

As is usual in compilations of this kind, the arrangement and number of the sections differ greatly in the MSS. The following prescription will show the character of the book:

yashṭitrijātakaṃ drāxā vyoshaṃ kharjūrajaṃ phalaṃ |
vṛiddhakarshādvikarshāçāṃ priyālaṃ musaliphalaṃ ||
musalī cā 'çvagandhā ca caturguṇasitāyutān |

jāṅgalair madhutāhāraiḥ payasā saha bhojayet ||
vṛiddho 'pi bhajate vīryaṃ strīçataṃ taruṇāyate ||

XXXV. मुंडीकल्पः Muṇḍīkalpa, Īçvarīk., Çālmalīk.

(5,462) D. ff. 3. Wants end.

Muṇḍī, etc., are names of plants; this tract directs how to prepare them for use.

XXXVI. ज्योतिष्मतीकल्पः Jyotishmatīkalpa.

The Jyotishmatī is a fabulous plant, supposed to sharpen the wits.

(10,758) Gr. ll. 36.

XXXVII. वाजीकरणम् Vājīkaraṇa.

(10,759) Te. ll. 28. With a ṭīkā.
(10,760) Te. ll. 40. A similar tract.
(4,822) D. ff. 16. Do.

4. Rasāyana.

This part of the Vaidyaçāstra corresponds with European medicine to a very limited extent, but is almost exactly the same as the mediæval alchemy, which it outdoes in absurdities. Most works of this class attach themselves to the Çaiva-tantras.

XXXVIII. रसरत्नसमुच्चयः Rasaratnasamuccaya, by Nityanāthasiddha, son of Çaṅkha-Gupta. Begins:

yasyā 'nandabhavane maṅgalakyāṃ saṃbhāvite sasphuraddhāmnā.

In the commencement the author gives the following list of writers on this subject, whose works he says he consulted:

adhamaç (atha°) candrasenaç ca laṅkeçaç ca viçāradaḥ |
kāpālikamatamāṇḍavyo bhāskaraḥ sūrasenakaḥ ||
ratnaghoshaç ca çaṃbhuç ca taxako naravāhanaḥ |

rasānām, etc.

A few explanations in Telugu.

(10,732) Te. ll. 254. Much the same as the last; in a large hand.

(10,733) Te. ll. 36—238. Recent and not inked. Begins in a. 6 (çishyopanayana); a. 7 (rasaçālāprakaraṇa)—40*b*. This MS. professes to end with a. 27. Few of the intermediate chapters are marked; nor do those I have observed agree with the last MS.

(10,734) Te. ll. 254. Old and much broken; wants the end.

(10,735) Te. ll. 320. Here called rasaratnākara and said to be by Nityanāthasiddha, son of Pārvatī. It is precisely similar, however, to the other MSS. in matter, and can hardly be considered a separate work.

XXXIX. रससार: Rasasāra, by Govindācārya. Begins:

gaṇeçam praṇipatyā 'dau çivaṃ ca çivayā saha |
gurubhairavasiddhebhyo yoginīgrahamaṇḍalaṃ ||

The author professes to have studied "all çāstras" in order to compose this treatise, and in the 25th (last) paṭala he says—

bauddhānāṃ ca mataṃ jñātvā rasasāro kṛito mayā |

By Bauddhas he probably means the Muhammedans (cf. the vernacular Malayāḷam use of the word), though studies of this nature were much pursued by the later Buddhists. About 1,000 gr. in çlokas.

(5,407) D. ff. 60. Recent.

(10,786) Te. ll. 24. Clearly written, about 1750, but not inked. The first and last ll. are injured.

XL. पुरुषार्थप्रबोध: Purushārthaprabodha. A treatise on mineral drugs and their use, with mantras, etc. In çlokas. The author's name is not mentioned.

(5,452) D. ff. 9. Wants the end.

5. Tantric System.

XLI. काश्यपसंहिता Kāçyapasaṃhitā, from some Tantra. Begins:

kailāsaçikhare ramye pārvatīparameçvarau |
anyonyasukhalīlāyām ekānte sukhagoshṭhishu ||
pārvatī patim ālokya kṛitāñjalir abhāshata |

tava prasādāc chāstrārthaṃ vedasāraṃ çrutaṃ mayā |
kvacid divyaṃ mamā 'kāṅxā çrotum icchāmi çaṅkara ||

Çiva then gives an account of diseases and their causes and cure. Sin (pāpa) is the cause, and therefore (as might be supposed) the treatment is much mixed up with religious observances. The diseases are classified very minutely, e.g. 20 kinds of kushṭa, 12 of gulma, etc.

(10,777) Te. ll. 220. Ends (apparently unfinished) with an account of çleshmaxaya and aṇḍaroga. About 3,300 gr.

(10,778) Te. ll. 9. Beginning only. Not inked.

XLII. आनंदकंद: Anandakanda, from the Bhairava-Tantra. A work similar to the last. Begins:

kailāsaçikharāsīnaṃ kālakandarpanāçanaṃ |
prasannaparameçānaṃ jagaḍānandakāraṇaṃ ||
praṇamya parayā bhaktyā bhairavī stutim ātanot |
devy uvāca | deva deva, etc.—
çrotum icchāmi deveça tava divyaṃ rasāyanaṃ |

For the contents of the sections see Aufrecht, p. 320*a*.

10 ullāsa (in 10,776) i.e. one more in the Bodleian MS.

(10,775) Te. ll. 174. Imperfect.

(10,776) Gr. ll. 374. About 9,000 gr.; apparently not complete.

XLIII. नागार्जुनीयम् Nāgārjunīya (?). Treatment by spells and medicine combined. Begins:

aṃāṃ i ī u ū e ai aṃ aḥ anena mantreṇa jāpyakartavyam aviralaṃ vaktā bhavati.

(5,404) D. ff. 19. Imperfect and exceedingly incorrect.

(5,459) D. ff. 117. Part of the above or a similar work with Mahratta C. by Aranātha.

(5,460) D. Several loose leaves containing similar prescriptions.

(10,722) Gr. ll. 129. Recent and not inked. Many lacunæ and imperfect.

XLIV. उमामहेश्वरसंवाद: Umāmaheçvarasaṃvāda, professing to contain the "essence of the Āyurveda," and to be composed by Nandikeçvara. Begins:

çrīmatkailāsaçailasya pārçve çrīdārukāvane |
munayo 'shṭasahasrāṇi vāsino brahmavādinaḥ ||
tadvanasya samīpe tu devā gaṅgā 'sti kācana |
vasante parṇaçālā 'sti vidyānirṇayaçobhinaḥ || etc.

(10,793) Gr. ll. 50. Recent; not inked. Ends with tailanirṇayapaṭala.

XLV. नाडीविज्ञानीयम् Nāḍīvijñānīya. 10 paṭalas, said to be an abridgment from the Carakasaṃhitā, Suçruta, Karṇika's and Yājñavalkya's works, etc., by Çiva. Begins:

praṇamya çirasā devaṃ çaçikaraṃ lokaçaṅkaraṃ |
pravaxyāmi samāsena nāḍītantram parīxya ca ||
ekasmin divase ramye kailāse ratnamaṇḍape |

Gr. 400.

In this MS. the Telugu names are generally given. a & c are fragments of vocabularies, chiefly in Telugu.

(10,724) Te. ll. 63. Written about 1650. Not inked. Vargas 4—6 more or less complete with the Telugu names. A fairly correct MS., and, as far as it goes, the best in the Library.

XLVII. अभिधानचूडामणिः Abhidhānacūḍāmaṇi, or Nighaṇṭurāja, by Narahari (Nṛisiṃha and Nṛihari), a Kashmirian, and son of Īçvarasūri. The preface to this comprehensive work has been given by Aufrecht, i. (pp. 323–4). The author occasionally adds to his çlokas the Mahratta or Canarese names of the substances he mentions, but the last are (at least in the Tanjore MSS.) very corrupt, and in many cases are quite beyond recognition.

(5,409) D. ff. 186. About 3,000 gr. v. 3 (guḍūcyādi-)—f. 1; 4 (çatāhvādi-)—11*b*; 5 (parpaṭādi-)—26; 6 (pippalādi-)—36; 7 (mūlakādi-)—54; 8 (çālmalyādi-)—70*b*; 9 (prabhadrakādi-)—82; 10 (karavīrādi-)—93*b*; 11 (āmrādi-)—109; 12 (candanādi-)—128*b*; 13 (suvarṇādi-)—141; 14 (pānīyādi-)—157*b*; 15 (xīrādi-)—170*b*; 16 (dhānya-)—179 f. Carefully corrected.

(5,410) D. ff. 12. Anūpādivarga, 1—f. 1; dharaṇyādivarga, 2—f. 6*b*. A recent transcript carefully corrected like the last.

(5,411) D. ff. 210. Vargas 3—15. Lacunæ toward the end. Recent.

(5,412) D. ff. 142. Do. Do.

(5,413) D. ff. 64. A recent transcript with many lacunæ. The first varga (17) begins:
māṃsaṃ tu piçitaṃ—vyaṃ palaṃtarasarasastrajaṃ |
palalāṅgalakīcarasāmīsham tad ucyate ‖1‖—f. 1.
18(manushyādi-)—7; 19(siṃhādi-)—14*b*; 20? (Rujābhidhāna)—25; 21 (sattvādi-)—33*b*; 22 (miçrakākhya)—40*b*; 23 (ekārthādi-)—46. Nos. 5,410, 5,409, and 5,413, thus make a complete copy, excepting lacunæ.

In each chapter the compiler gives a brief list of contents, then the synonyms for each substance, and afterwards describes its medical qualities, and those of its varieties. He makes a very free use of Amarasiṃha's Nāmaliṅgānuçāsana (kosha), giving sometimes whole verses from that book, and frequently parts of çlokas, though I have not noticed any acknowledgment. Of the practical part of this work it is unnecessary to speak, even where drugs as yet unknown to the Pharmacopœia appear to be mentioned; the description of their uses is so defective in precision that it would not be worth while to run the risk of experiments. Dr. Sir W. Ainslie (in his Materia Medica)[1] appears to have collected all information that is likely to be of use. As regards the philological use of this work and Dhanvantari's Nighaṇṭu, there is little room for hoping that a large list of new words may be found for the Sanskrit Dictionary. A great number of new words may no doubt be found, but they belong to the Dravidian or other vernacular languages of India. More than this, there is every reason to believe that the real significations of a great number of ancient Sanskrit names of plants and other natural objects have long been lost. The açoka tree of the S. Indian Jains is of a different species to the Jonesia

[1] This admirable work is now being reprinted (3rd edition) at Madras by Messrs. Higginbotham and Co. It first appeared in one vol. 4to. at Madras in 1813, and was reprinted in London, 1826.

Açoka of Bengal, which is an exotic in the South. In three different provinces of the Madras Presidency I have been shown in unquestionable good faith as many distinct varieties for the Soma. The Devadāru according to the vernacular use of this word is the Erythroxylon areolatum! Most of the flowers mentioned in Sanskrit poems are unknown in the South of India, at least quite different plants are there pointed out by Pandits; they (perhaps with justice) argue that they are quite as likely to be in the right as Pandits from other parts of India. Sanskrit scholars[1] seem to have lost sight of the fact that India is composed of a number of widely distinct countries, and in consequence with very distinct flora; though the same Sanskrit names of plants are found everywhere. On the other hand, it is certain that the Sanskrit names of many Indian products are taken from the Dravidian languages. As a brief specimen I give the passage relating to the Mango tree, about the identity of which there can be no doubt:

The first, or dravyaguṇākathanapariccheda, treats of the different medicinal powers of grains, roots, oils, butters, and

[1] Except Prof. Benfey, see his remark in his preface to Fick's "Wörterbuch der Indo-Germanischen Grundsprache" (1st edition, p. viii). "Ferner waren ihnen eine Menge Gegenstände des Naturreichs bekannt; eine Fülle von Pflanzen, deren ursprüngliche Bedeutung jedoch theilweise schwierig zu erkennen ist, da sie wohl die Namen . . . mit sich nahmen, aber sie in den in Bezug auf ihre Flora so sehr von einander abweichenden neuen Wohnsitzen neu vertheilen mussten."

similar articles of diet, and dishes composed of these articles. Sūpa is said to be dālī tu salile siddhā lavaṇārdakahiṅgubhiḥ | saṃyuktā.

This word sūpa originally meant a flesh-broth, here it is applied to a S. Indian pepper-water.[1] The inevitable betel is then discussed at full length; then the effect of cooking pots of different metals on food, and lastly, somewhat out of place, the medical effect of different kinds and colours of dresses.

P. ii. begins—yo vedāsyapitā—this treats of the religious and ceremonial part of the subject; i.e. the ceremonially unclean articles of food, either as unclean in themselves, or from the mode of preparation or caste of the cook. The vaiçvadeva offering, feeding of guests, are also described.

P. iii. begins — niçeshabhūshāhayitasya bhūtyai — it is called vibhavarīvilāsa, and treats of the furniture and such accessories, the physical and spiritual effects produced by different articles of that description, and ends with a number of short miscellaneous sections, mostly but little connected with the matter in hand.

In the first part, the Rājanighaṇṭu, Vāgbhaṭa, and a Vyāsa are chiefly quoted. As might be expected, an immense number of substances mentioned are called by their Telugu and Tamil names. In the second and third parts, besides nearly all the usual smṛitis, several recent digests, such as the Madanapārijāta, the Smṛityarthasāra and Saṅgraha, are quoted, also most of the purāṇas. It is therefore safe to conclude that the pedant who compiled this absurd book was a native of S. India, and lived late in the 17th or in the beginning of the 18th century A.D. Worthless, however, as it may be, it is a singular instance of the burdensome restrictions which rule Indian life, and which have so far prevailed that the gratification of the palate is not thought worthy of notice in comparison with minute ceremonial detail. Sancho Panza's experience in Barataria is here a sad actuality. In this, as in all other pākaçāstras (Sanskrit Cookery books) which I have seen, except that attributed to Nala (see next entry), there is not a single good receipt, or the slightest indication that a sense of taste exists in India. Practically it may be said that an art of Cookery scarcely exists in India, the number of dishes in use being very small, and varied rather to please the eye than the taste. Nor from a philological stand-point is this book of the least value.

The king begs for instruction, frightened by the long list of calamities Nala mentions as the result of not knowing the properties of articles of diet, and the result is four prakaraṇa. This MS. professes to be complete; I have, however, seen (at Madras) a much larger and different work on this subject, also attributed to Nala. The receipts here are some of them very curious, and, as red pepper is not mentioned, the book must have been written before the arrival of the Portuguese. Now there is not a single dish made without it.

LVI. सारसंग्रहः Sārasaṅgraha (also called siddhayogasaṅgraha, açvāyurveda, and sārasindhu), compiled by Gaṇa, son of Durlabha, from the teaching of Çālihotra, a muni. It is described as a saṃhitā, consisting of 6,000 çlokas, which is probably near the mark. It is a palpable imitation of the Caraka and similar medical saṃhitās, and professes to be originally a revelation, from which several munis composed each a saṃhitā. The MSS. are all broken and injured, and the chapters do not quite follow the same order, but the anukramaṇī, from the second chapter (in No. 5,467), gives a fair view of the contents. With a few corrections, it runs:

Little attention seems, however, to be paid to the breed of horses, and they are here judged rather by marks, and knots, and curls in the hair of the breast and back.[1] A good deal is said on diet, possibly the result of experience. Among the prescriptions, flesh-meat broth is prescribed for Vātarikāra, and this is perhaps a sufficient proof of the veracity of Marco Polo, which has been often (for this at least) unreasonably questioned, because he says (ch. clxix., Pauthier's edition, vol. ii. p. 620)—"encore sachiez que il donnent à mengier à leur chevaus ris avec char cuite et pluseurs autres choses cuites. Et ce est pourquoy il se muerent touz en ce pays." Numerous boiled messes are prescribed in the sārasaṅgraha. The practice of giving meat to horses must be well known to all who have lived in India even a short time, and it is singular it should be so generally disbelieved. Col. Yule has given an amusing note on the subject, Marco Polo, vol. ii. pp. 336-7. The mention of Raṭṭakula is pretty nearly conclusive that this treatise was compiled in Central India, and probably about the 11th or 12th century, as the Muhammedans are also mentioned, and the list of breeds given above is interesting, as it proves that horses were then imported from Cabul, Arabia, and the North, just as they were till quite lately. Yāvana could only mean Arabia at the time this work was compiled.

Several verses quoted by Çārṅgadhara (Z. d. D. M. G. xxvii.) as by Çālihotra (18 in all are to be found there) also occur, but by no means all of them.

(5,467) D. ff. 75. Breaks off in the Cikitsāsthāna. Begins: sapushṭidaṃ khādanabhojanaṃ ca āhārakāle vividhaṃ tu dattaṃ | saṅgrāmakāle turagā(ḥ) smaranti |

This MS. (evidently copied from a Telugu original) was probably written about 1650, and is very fragile. Most of the ff. are in fragments.

(10,747) N.N. ll. 259. Much broken at the beginning and end, and injured by white ants. Sthāna 2 begins—l. 46; 3—76*b*.; 4—110*b*.; 5—114; 6—275 (reckoned on the reverse side). Written about 1650.

(10,748) Te. ll. 192, and anukramaṇī 14 ll. Written about 1700. Begins with the second (?) chapter of sthāna 1, and ends about the middle of s. 5.

(10,749) a. Te. ll. 100. s. 4 (wants beginning) to s. 5, also imperfect and injured by damp.

b. Te. ll. 17. A fragment of s. 2 (?).

(10,750) Te. ll. 8. A fragment of s. 2. Written about 1700.

(10,751) Te. ll. 13. Fragments; not inked.

(11,087) Te. ll. 42. ("açvapraçaṃsā" only.)

(12,311) D. ff. 51. Ends with laxaṇasthāna.

(12,312) D. ff. 94 and (anukr.) 11. Contains the cikitsāsthāna. The continuation is in the next MS.

(12,313) D. ff. 181—266 and 18. Do. Recent.

(12,370) D. ff. 210. Laxaṇa and cikitsā.

(12,371) D. ff. Prescriptions in Mahr.

All these MSS. are not only very incorrect, but also carelessly copied.

LVII. शालिहोत्रीय: Çālihotrīya. This seems to be a recent compilation.

[1] The Raṭṭakula race was a family of Jain princes of Central Telingana and Canara in the 10th century, according to inscriptions (see my "Palæography," 2nd edition, p. 54).

[2] MS. kāṃçarevāç.

[1] There is a Mahratta book in the library with pictures in it of horses with the different marks, etc. The illustrations are very curious.

(12,302) D. ff. 302. Recent. Ends with ch. xxviii. (āvartādhyāya) of the Laxaṇasthāna. Gr. 1880. Begins:
jāhnvyā uttaratīre prāleyādres taṭāntare |

brahmasūryāgnitejaskaṃ hayaçāstraviçāradam ||
They ask: sambhavaḥ katham açvānāṃ? vāhanatvaṃ kathaṃ gatāḥ?

It is in the purāṇic form of a dialogue between Çālihotra and Suçruta. The first third is purely mythological; then come chapters on age, colour, marks, castes, horses suitable for a king, etc., āvartta, which is the last (xxviii.), but several chapters appear to be wanting.

LVIII. अश्वशास्त्रम् Açvaçāstra.

(12,306) D. ff. 98. A modern compilation; mere extracts. Gr. 1030.
(12,308) D. ff. 32 and 2 (anukr.).

LIX. अश्वशास्त्रम् Açvaçāstra, by Nakula. Consists of xiv. chapters on "cikitsita" or veterinary medicine.

(12,304) D. ff. 22. Fragment; wants first 10 çl.
(12,309) D. ff. 25. Do. This book begins here:

2. Of Elephants.

LX. गजवैद्यः Gajavaidya. This name appears to be not very certain; it consists of dialogues between a king of Aṅga and a muni called Pālakāpya, who is the offspring of a Ṛishi and a pious female elephant. There is a great deal of mythological matter about the creation, the origin of elephants, who were originally winged, and were deprived of those appendages by the curse of an angry saint, who was pestered by their tumbling down on him from the trees round his hermitage, on which they used to perch in order to graze on the leaves. The rest refers to the points of animals, as usual, very fanciful; their castes and dispositions, the way of taming them; their diseases and the way of treating and of curing them. The number of their diseases appears to be put at 106. There can be no doubt that this is a very modern compilation, even later than the Sārasaṅgraha (on horses). Some of the verses, however, which are found here, occur in Çārṅgadhara, as by Pālakāpya. See Aufrecht's paper in the Z. d. D. M. G. vol. xxvii. pp. 1—120.

(5,465) D. ff. 169. With a Telugu version (in the Devanāgari character) of greater part. Begins:
athā 'taḥ sampravaxyāmi vayaso jñānam ishyate |
yo na vetti stanyajātaṃ māse jñātaçrapi . . çuḥ ||
Ends abruptly. A recent S. Indian transcript.
(5,466) D. ff. 95. Do. A fragment.
(10,737) Te. ll. 44—397. Written about 1650. With a Telugu word for word translation interpolated between the çlokas. Ends vidoshacikitsitam. Begins with p. 21 of No. (5,465). Evidently copied by an ignorant Telugu scribe.

I. सिद्धान्तशिरोमणिः Siddhāntaçiromaṇi, by Bhāskarâcārya. Written in 1150 (Aufrecht, ii. p. 51).

Chap. I. Līlāvatī.

(4,249) D. ff. 22. Wants the end.
(4,250) D. ff. 29. A recent transcript.
(11,000—11,003). Two Gr. and two Te. MSS.
a. attributed to a Keçava. Begins: prītiṃ bhaktaja(n)asya yo janayate vighnaṃ vinighnaṃ . . . .

Chap. II. Vījagaṇita.

Printed at Calcutta, 1834—53. Translated by Colebrooke (1817). Also (from a Persian version) by E. Strachey (1813).
(4,252) D. ff. 49. A recent MS.
(4,253) D. ff. 71.
(4,261) D. ff. 7. A badly-written fragment.

a. Vījapallava, a C. on the Vījagaṇita by Kṛishṇa. Begins:
Çivayor bhojanātigauravād yatsutalīlādhṛitakuñjarā svarūpaṃ |
The author gives an account of his family as follows:
āsīd asīmaguṇaratnanidhānakumbhaḥ khumbhodbhavābharaṇadiglalanālalāma | āçaiçavārjitaviçeshakalānuvarttī çrī-keçavaḥ sugaṇitāgamacakravarttī || tasmād abhūd bhuvanabhūshaṇabhūtamūrttiḥ çrīmān agaṇyaguṇagauravageyakīrttiḥ |

bhrātuḥ sutas tasya yathārthanāmā nṛisiṃha ity adbhutarūpaçobhaḥ |
avardhayad yo jagatām abhīshṭaṃ prahlādam āçcaryakaraḥ surāṇam || 8 ||
tacchishyo *vishṇu*nāmā sa jayati jagatījāgarūkapratishṭhaḥ çishṭānām agraganyaḥ subhaṇitaganitāmnāyavidyāçaraṇyaḥ |
. . . . . .
tasmād adhītya vidhivat triskandhaṃ jyotisham guroḥ |
kṛishṇo daivavidāṃ çreshṭhas tanute vījapallavam || 10 ||
This genealogy agrees with that given in Nṛisiṃha's C. on the Sūryasiddhānta (see Aufrecht, ii. pp. 41 ffg.), and the author must, therefore, have lived in the 16th century. Gr. 4,400.
(4,247) D. ff. 114. Written Çak. 1523. Two or three leaves have been replaced, and the calculations carefully corrected. A few diagrams are given.

Chap. III.—IV. Gaṇita and Gola Chapters.

Edited by L. Wilkinson (Calcutta, 1842); also issued at Calcutta in 1856, and edited again (at Benares) in 1866.

(4,259) D. ff. 91. Begins with kālamāna and ends with udayāstavāsana sections.
(4,260) D. ff. 9. A fragment.
(4,283) D. Do.

II. वाक्यामृतम् Vākyāmṛita, a treatise on Gaṇita, by Tulajarāja (of Tanjore; latter part of the 18th century), or rather in his name.

(4,268) D. ff. 71. Injured by the damp, especially the first f.

III. कुट्टाकारशिरोमणिः Kuṭṭākāraçiromaṇi 'muktāvalī'; a ṭīkā on the above, by Devarāja, son of Varadācārya, of the Atri family.

(11,050) Gr. ll. 6—59. Written about 1700; injured. Two sections are marked—sāgrapariccheda (prathama), which ends on 17*b*., and is followed by a niragrapariccheda. The text is in āryā metre, and therefore it is possible that the statement on the cover that this is a part of a C. on a work by Āryabhaṭa is correct. It is not, however, on the small Āryabhaṭīya. To the larger Siddhānta of Āryabhaṭa (Aufrecht, i. pp. 325*b*. ffg.) I am unable to refer.

IV. इनकुलतेजोनिधिः Inakulatejonidhi, by Tulajarāja, of Tanjore, or rather in his name. The book was, apparently, never finished. It is based on Çrīpati's work.

(4,263) D. ff. 34. Fragments on gaṇita. Begins:
yadīyāṅghridvandvam nikhilanigamāntaḥprakaṭitaprabhāvam bhaktānām smṛitam abhimatānekaphaladam | (etc., 5 verses). Then comes the following genealogy:
āsīn mālojirāje dinakarakulajāt, tatsutaḥ çāharājaḥ; putras tasyai 'karājaḥ sakalagunanidhiḥ bhosalāmbodhicandraḥ | dīpāmbā tasya bhāryā tribhuvanaviditā tatkumāras trayo 'mī (sic) | çāhendraḥ çrīçarophāvanipati(s) Tulajaḥ xonipālāvataṃsaḥ ‖6‖ teshām puṇyaprabhāvād vidhur iva jaladher āçrayaḥ satkalānām yekojixonipālas tulajanarapater bhāti jātaḥ kumārāḥ, etc.
(4,267) D. ff. 95. Continuation of the above. Ends with goladhyāya (the 12th ch.), and then comes: samāpto 'yaṃ gaṇitaskandaḥ.
(4,230) D. ff. 46. A fragment on jātakas.

V. सौरपक्षगणितम् Saurapaxagaṇita. The author's name is not mentioned. Begins:

vighnāṭavīṃ vighaṭayan vividhīpsitārthān sampūrayan sakalamaṅgalanāyako yaḥ | devo gajānana iti prathitas trilokyām kalyāṇam eva sakalaṃ prakaṭīkarotu ‖
(4,264) D. ff. 14. Imperfect; wants end.
Chiefly follows Bhāskara.

VI. ग्रहणनिर्णयः Grahaṇanirṇaya.

(4,266) D. ff. 4. A N. Indian MS. Wants end; incorrect.

VII. वेंकटाद्रिनाथीयम् Veṅkaṭādrināthīya-grahatantra, by Nṛisiṃhasūri, son of Çiṅgaṇṇa, who lived near Venkaṭagiri. Begins:

çreyaḥpativibhuṃ nityaṃ sṛishṭisthityantakāraṇam | etc.
This is a mere compilation.
(4,270) D. ff. 30. A recent transcript. Lacunæ, and wants end.

VIII. यंत्रराजव्याख्यानम् Yantrarājavyākhyāna. The writer is Mahendra. Begins:

çrīsarvajñapadāmbujaṃ hṛidi parāmṛiçya . . . . . .
çrīmantaṃ madanākhyasūrigurum, etc.
(4,271) D. ff. 22. A carelessly written S. Indian MS.

IX. भूगोलविस्तारः Bhūgolavistāra. Said to be from the Brahmāṇḍa-Purāṇa.

(4,286) D. ff. 8. Wants end.

X. सोमसिद्धान्तः Somasiddhānta, a compendium in 10 chapters, said by Professor Aufrecht (ii. p. 30) to be a modern composition. Begins:

bṛihaspatisutaṃ çāntaṃ sukhāsīnaṃ priyexaṇaṃ |
abhivādya muniḥ somaṃ çaunakaṃ paripricchati ‖
bhagavān (sic)! sarvaçāstrārthaṃ sarvabhūtahite rata | kathaṃ grahas tit(h)ijñeyo lagnakālavibhākramāt ‖
uparāyaç ca kheṭānāṃ yogas tārāgrahāgamaḥ | graharxāstodayahataḥ sapāpigraharūpiṇaḥ ‖ çriṅgonnati . . . . . etc.
About 350 gr.
(4,280) D. ff. 13. A recent and incorrect N. Indian MS. This work is here called the fourth or Çaunakapraçna of the Somasiddhānta. Adhyāya i. (madhyagaty°)—f. 1; ii. (sphuṭā°)—3; iii. (tripraçnā°)—5; iv. (candrasūryagrahaṇā°)—6; v. (parilekhanā°)—7; vi. (bhagrahayogā°)—7*b*; vii. (grahodayāstamayā°)—8*b*; viii. (candraçṛiṅgonnaty°)—9; ix. (pātavidhṛity°)—9*b*; x. (golā)—10. On European paper. These names differ slightly from those given in Aufrecht, ii. p. 31.

XI. वासिष्ठसिद्धान्तः Vāsishṭhasiddhānta, a compendium in 5 short chapters; also (according to Professor Aufrecht, ii. p. 29) a very modern compilation. About 100 gr. Begins:

aṇimādiguṇādhāram apratyaxam agocaram |
nirguṇaṃ niravandyaṃ taṃ namāmi brahma sarvagam ‖
svarochishamanor ādyam (?) yugādau munisattama(ḥ) |
. . . . . .
upagamya muniçreshṭho vasishṭham idam abravīt ‖
bho! brahmatanaya sṛishṭisthitināçanakāraṇam | tattvajñānam aha jñātum grahanaxatrasaṃplavam ‖ āgato 'smi muneça! . . . . etc.
(4,281) D. ff. 5. Recent; on handmade European paper. 1 Madhyagrahādhyāya—f. 1; 2 sphuṭādhyāya—2*b*.; 3 chāyādhyāya—4; 4 prakīrṇādhyāya—4; 5 golādhyāya—4*b*.

XII. सूर्यसिद्धान्तः Sūryasiddhānta, the best-known Indian Manual of Astronomy. Edited, with a C. (the Gūḍhārthaprakāça), in the B.I. A translation has been published in the American Oriental Society's Journal (edited by Professor Whitney), and also in the B.I.

(4,275) D. ff. 23. First and last ff. injured at the edges.
(4,276) D. 16. A recent transcript.
(11,005) Te. ll. 14.
(11,006) Te. ll. 12. Imperfect.

a. Sūryasiddhāntabhāshya, a C. on the last, by Nṛisiṃhadeva, son of Vishṇudaivajña. See above (I. a.), and Aufrecht, ii. pp. 41 ff. Begins with the Sūryagrahaṇādhikāra, and ends with the Mānādhikāra.
(4,279) D. ff. 19.
(4,277) D. ff. 49. A transcript of the last.

b. Kalpavallī (ṭīkā) by Yallaya, son of Çrīdharācārya. This appears to extend only to the bhūgolādhyāya. Begins:

brahmāṇḍoditakārye çaṃbhuç çaṃbhārasaḥ |
(4,278) D. ff. 37. A recent S. Indian transcript. 1,500 gr.
(4,292) D. ff. 12. A fragment wanting beginning and end.

XIII. ग्रहलाघवम् Grahalāghava, by Gaṇeça, son of Keçavārka (16th century). Edited by L. Wilkinson (Calcutta, 1843), and lithographed at Benares (1864).

Tīkā by Mallāri, son of Divākara. This C. is given in both editions of the text; see above.

(4,258) D. ff. 120. Complete. A N. Indian MS. of about 1650.

b. JUDICIAL ASTROLOGY, HOROSCOPES, DIVINATION.

XIV. गर्गसंहिता Gargasaṃhitā, the oldest astrological work as yet discovered in India. The only tolerably complete notice I have seen of this treatise is in Aufrecht, ii. pp. 32—36, but it is not sufficient to enable me to say positively whether or not the two fragments in this Library form parts of the genuine work.

(4,212) D. ff. 28. A recent and rough S. Indian transcript containing çl. 122—145 (ends iti prathamāṅkaprakaraṇa) and çl. 211—446 of a pāçakāvalī (on omens by dice). Çl. 211 runs:

dvikaṃ padaṃ padaṃ cai 'va patito dunḍhubhis tava |
mahākāryam idaṃ citidhamārthaç 'cititas tava || (sic.)

It ends:

pūrvam āsīt tathā vandyo gargo nāma mahāmuniḥ |
tena svayaṃ nigadatā sā jñeyā pāçakāvaliḥ ||
iti çrī*garga*viracitā *pāçakā*valiḥ saṃpūrṇā ||

This fragment seems doubtful.

(11,053) d. 16*b*.—17*b*. Gr. rāhucāra. This is probably genuine; see Aufrecht, ii. p. 35. It forms a single leaf in a book containing extracts from Astrological works (copied about 1700), which, with this exception, are not of the least value or interest. Begins:

vaiçākhe parvanor ante jyeshṭhā cet pratipadyate |
shashṭhanāḍyā ikānāḍyo vārair bhuktaṃ viço . . || (sic)
sarve jarā bahuklishṭā rājaduḥkhaprapīḍitāḥ |

ghṛitaṃ tailaṃ rasaṃ sarvaṃ saṅgraheyur vicaxaṇāḥ |
māsadvayena devendra lābhaç ca d(v)iguṇaṃ bhavet ||

XV. भृगुसंहिता Bhṛigusaṃhitā. This is no genuine saṃhitā, but is perhaps based on one.

(4,194) D. a. 120 ff. Mesha:

praṇamya Keçavaṃ çambhuṃ brahmāṇaṃ gaṇanāyakaṃ |
pūrvoktaṃ . . āsthāya kriyate yogasāgaraḥ ||

g. 58 ff. Tulā. Written Saṃv. 1874.

paxaloke gataṃ bhūpaṃ sa tv arshapramāṇakaṃ |

h. 74 ff. Vṛiçcika:

lagneço yadā çreshṭhe 'shṭame so 'pi saptamaḥ |

j. 47 ff. Dhanuḥ:

dhamulagnodaye jmaḥ lagneso lagmasamsthitaṃ | (sic)

k. 16 ff. Makara:

mese (sic) gurulanavṛintaḥ saptame | . . . .

Many diagrams in the text. A modern N. Indian MS. The whole probably contains 30,000 gr.

(4,195) D. ff. 67. Siṃha section copied from last (e). These MSS. are all very carelessly copied, and full of errors.

XVI. बृहज्जातकम् Bṛihajjātaka, by Varāhamihira. Repeatedly printed in India, at Bombay, Benares, and Madras, etc. both with and without CC.

(10,975) Te. ll. 22. A fragment; not inked, full of lacunæ, and wanting the beginning and end.

XVII. बृहत्संहिता Bṛihatsaṃhitā by Varāhamihira. The text has been edited by Dr. Kern in the B.I.; the learned editor has also translated a part (in the Journal of the R.A.S., and also separately: London).

(4,196) D. ff. 643. Text together with Bhaṭṭa Utpala's C. Ends with the Çākuṇādhyāya.

Regarding this C., see Dr. Kern's remarks in the preface to his edition of the text.

XVIII. पाराशर्यम् Pārāçarya.

(4,204) D. ff. 81. Pūrvabhāga, beginning with rāçisvarūpādhyāya and ending with an arishṭādhyāya. Recent; however, ff. 1 and 2 are much injured at the edges. Gr. 1,650. Begins:

XIX. ज्योतिषरत्नमाला Jyotisharatnamālā, a compendium of astrology by Çrīpatibhaṭṭa. 21 prakaraṇas commencing with Saṃvatsarap. and ending pratishṭhāp. 1,600 gr.

These two lines show the style of this book; it is probably by the author under whose name it passes.
(4,228) D. ff. 14. 10 lines to a page, a recent and tolerably correct MS. Lacunæ on ff. 11—12, where the end of ch. xvi. and the beginning of ch. xvii. are wanting.

This work is tolerably common in Malabar, and I take it (from fragments I have seen there) to be a large work if complete. There is a copy (of part) among the MSS. I presented to the India Office.

XXII. संवत्सरफलानि Saṃvatsaraphalāni.

Of all branches of Sanskrit Liturature in the Tanjore Library, the Jyotihçāstra is one of the worse represented; not only are the MSS. nearly all of little importance, but they are also carelessly written, and in a very damaged condition, mostly mere fragments. For treatises on times with reference to purely religious ceremonies, see under Dharmaçāstra.

[1] These are old arts in India. The peculiar marks attributed to Buddha are an early example of this superstition.

This work (a. i. 2—iv.) contains, according to Dr. Hall, 19,200 gr.

I. Nyāyasudhā, a C. on Kumārila's Tantravārttika, by Someçvarabhaṭṭa, son of Trikāṇḍimīmāṃsāmandana Bhaṭṭa Mādhava. This work is also called Rāṇaka. Fragments exist in the Bodleian (Aufrecht, i. p. 219).

(2,089) D. ff. 224. a. i. pāda 3.
(9,572) Gr. ll. 138. Recent, imperfect a. i.
(9,573) Gr. ll. 166. Written about 1600. Much injured and greater part illegible.
(9,574) Gr. ll. 104. a. 2.
(9,576) N.N. ll. 85—164. Wants beginning and end. a. i. (?)
(9,578) N.N. a. ll. 115—170; b. ll. 87. Much injured. Parts of a. i. pp. 3 and 4.

Ia. Subodhinī (or Sudhāsāra), a C. on the last, by Annambhaṭṭa, son of Tirumalācārya.

(2,092) a. Te. ff. 189 (ff. 77, 180 are missing). Written about 1820. a. i. pāda 4.
Begins:
çivayoḥ çāçvataikatvaṃ tanotu çubhasantatiṃ |
nidarçayitum advaitam bhajatām iva saṅgataṃ ‖
vāṇīṃ guruṃ gaṇeçaṃ ca praṇamya tadanugrahāt | vyākhyāsye phakkikāṃ gūḍhāṃ rāṇakasya kvacit kvacit ‖
"kṛitsnaças tadprasādene" 'ti guruprasādeṇa, etc.
b. Te. ff. 188. a. ii.
c. Te. ff. 154. a. iii. to nearly the end of p. 2.
d. Te. ff. 131 (f. 123 is wanting). do. pāda 4.
e. Te. ff. 100. Do. pādas 6 and 7 (wants conclusion).
These fragments contain about 30,000 gr.

b. Tuptīkā, a C. on adhyāyas v.—xii. of the Mīmāṃsāsūtra, by Kumārilasvāmin.[1] This can hardly be called a C. on Çabara's bhāshya. It is rather an exceedingly brief summary of the line of argument of the sūtras.

(9,579) b. Gr. ll. 8. Written about 1800. a. viii. 1 to 3 only.

bb. Vārttikābharaṇa, a C. on the Ṭupṭīkā, by Veṅkaṭeçvaradīxita, son of Govindadīxita, and younger brother of Yājñanārāyaṇadīxita. See B. C. p. 53; Hall, p. 172.

(9,579) a. Gr. ll. 84. Written about 1750. adhyāya viii. pāda 1 (f. 1); 2 (57); 3 (63*b*.); 4 (80).

Begins: atha viçeshalaxaṇam | atha khalu bhagavān ācāryas saptameṇā 'shṭamasya saṅgaṭe spashṭatvāt tām anabhidhāyā 'tra bhāshyakāreṇa evan tāvat saptameṇā 'dhyāyena (sāmā-) nyato 'tideçalaxaṇam uktam, etc.

(9,577) Gr. ll. 6—260. Recent and not inked. adhyāya x. pādas 2—8. Wants beginning and end.

(9,578) Gr. ll. 6—202. Written about 1700. Much injured. ll. 1—5, 141, 188, 189, are wanting. a. x. p. 2—8.

c. Phalavatī, a vṛitti to the Jaiminisūtra. The author's name does not appear.

(9,584) Gr. ll. 97—246. A few ll. are missing, but as most of the ll. have the numbers broken off, and are much injured, it would take a very minute examination to decide which are lost. This MS. contains a. vi.—x. 4. Can this be the vṛitti of Upavarsha? (Hall, p. 169).

d. Çāstradīpikā, a C. on the Jaiminisūtra, by Pārthasārathi Miçra, son of Yajñātma Miçra. An imperfect MS. exists at Berlin ("Verzeichniss," p. 175), and Hall refers only to imperfect MSS.

(2,040) a. adhy. i. pāda 1, 92 ff. About 3,000 gr.

Begins: laxmīkaustubhavaxasaṃ muraripuṃ çaṅkhāsikaumodakīhastaṃ padmapalāçatāmranayanaṃ pītāmbaraṃ çārṅgiṇaṃ |

meghaçyāmam udārarayivaracaturbāhuṃ pradhānāt paraṃ çrīvatsāṅkam anāthanātham amṛitaṃ vande mukundam mudā ‖ 1 ‖

Çabarasvāminam natvā bhaṭṭācāryaṃ ca Jaiminim |
Kumārilamateṇā 'haṃ karishye çāstradīpikām ‖ 2 ‖

"athā 'taḥ," etc.

This shows conclusively that this work belongs to the Theistic school, and not to the Atheistic, as is commonly asserted. This MS. is a good one, written 50—60 years ago in S. India. There are a few lacunæ in the latter chapters. Hall (v.s.) is mistaken in supposing that this C. begins with the second pāda of a. i. There is also a MS. of this commentary on pāda 1 in the Bodleian (Aufrecht, i. p. 220).

[1] In the printed text of the Jaiminisūtra and Çabara's C. (p. 68) viii. i. note, the Ṭupṭīkā is quoted (apparently second hand) as the vyākhyā of the Vārttikakṛit. The nature of Kumārila's C. or CC. on the Jaiminisūtra and on Çabara's C. is not yet fully ascertained; see Hall's Index, pp. 170—1. Parts only seem to be in existence.

[1] Colebrooke (Essays, i. 299) has singularly misunderstood this name, and translated it. It is a very common one among the S. Indian Vaishṇavas.

(2,111) D. ff. 5. Recent.

The atheistic Mīmāṃsā of Prabhākara (or Guru) has been almost completely lost, and is chiefly known by quotations in the Çāstradīpikā and similar works. It is, beyond doubt, the oldest form of this system, and as every notice of it is of great interest, I give the account from the two MSS. (2,111 and 9,678), though this tract is obviously a recent compilation, and both MSS. are very incorrect in parts.

I. जैमिनीयन्यायमालाविस्तरः Jaiminīyanyāyamālāvistara, by Mādhavācārya. A complete treatise on Mīmāṃsā doctrine in 12 books; verse and prose. A splendid critical edition of this work was commenced by Dr. Goldstücker in 1863, and has been finished by Prof. Cowell. In S. India this treatise is generally called Bhāṭṭasāra.

(2,099) D. ff. 243. Wants end.

IX. न्यायप्रकाशः Nyāyaprakāça, by Āpadeva. The most popular introduction to the Mīmāṃsā (v. Hall, p. 185). For a detailed description see "Notices," i. p. 167. About 2,500 gr. Aufrecht (i. p. 219) has already given the beginning.

(9,586) Te. ll. 64. Much worm-eaten.

XI. भाट्टरहस्यम् Bhāṭṭarahasya, by Khaṇḍadeva. A treatise on Mīmāṃsā, for beginners. Apparently in 2 paricchedas.

(2,072) D. ff, 126. Paricceda i.

(9,557) Gr. ll. 61. Wants end; injured.

XII. भावनाविचारः Bhāvanāvicāra.

(2,116) D. ff. 6. Wants end.

XIII. मत्वर्थलक्षणविचार: Matvarthalaxaṇavicāra (sic), by Bhāskararaya. This tract is very illegible, and is full of errors of orthography. What is intended by the title I cannot guess.

(2,115) D. ff. 18. Wants end.

XIV. मीमांसासिद्धान्तार्या Mīmāṃsāsiddhāntāryā. A brief exposition, in āryā verses, of the purport of the Jaiminisūtra. The author's name does not appear.

(2,112) D. ff. 24. Wants end.

XV. विधिरसायनसुखोपजीविनी Vidhirasāyanasukhopajīvinī, by Appayadīxita. Begins:

udghaṭya yogakalayā hṛidayābjakoçam
dhanyaiç cirād api yathāruci gṛihyamāṇaḥ | yaḥ prasphuraty aviratam paripūrṇarūpaḥ
çreyaḥ sa me diçatu çāçvatikaṃ mukundaḥ ||

All the following MSS. are called Vidhirasāyana; but it is plain from the third verse of the introduction that it is the author's C., the name of which I take from Hall, p. 194. The verse is as follows:—

yat kumārilamatānusāriṇā nirmitaṃ vidhirasāyanaṃ mayā |
padyarūpam anatisphuṭāçayaṃ tatsukhāvagataye vivicyate ||

According to this, Dr. Hall is not justified in stating (p. 194) that the Vidhirasāyana is a confutation, in verse, of the Mīmāṃsā as expounded by Bhaṭṭa Kumārila.

The whole forms a summary of Vedānta doctrine, and consists of (a) çlokas (184), which the author of the C. (Ānandagiri) says Çaṅkarācārya learned from Gauḍapāda (the teacher of his teacher Govinda), and (b) prose consisting of Çaṅkarācāryā's elucidations. The several chapters contain mystical explanations of a, u, m, and om. For other MSS. of the first prakaraṇa, see p. 34.

adhigatabhidā pūrvācāryān upetya sahasradhā sarid iva mahībhedān samprāpya çauripadodgatā |
jayati bhagavatpādaçrīmanmukhāmbujanirgatā jananaharaṇī sūktibrahmādvayaikaparāyaṇī ||1||

teshū 'papādanāpexān paxān prāyo yathāmati |
yuktyo 'papādayann eva likhāmy anativistaram ||3||

About 2,200 granthas. It must be remembered that Appayadīxita was a strenuous supporter of the Çaivavedānta, and that, therefore, works by him which, like the present, prefer indifference, can hardly with safety be taken as representative of the orthodox Vedānta.

The work was printed at Calcutta in 1851, and the Vairāgyaprakaraṇa, with the C., was printed also at Calcutta, in 1864 (Haas, p. 169). This is a favourite work all over India. Hall considers that it is posterior to Çaṅkara ("Rational Refutation," p. 177*n.*), but it cannot be called a modern book.

XI. पंचदशी Pañcadaçī, a digest, in verse, of the Vedānta doctrine, by Mādhavācārya (Bhāratītīrthavidyāraṇya), in 15 prakaraṇas. This is, everywhere in India, a very popular work. In S. India there is a tolerably exact Tamil version, which has been translated (in German) by Dr. Graul in his "Bibliotheca Tamulica," vol. i. XII. वेदांतपरिभाषा Vedāntaparibhāshā, a concise introduction to the Vedānta technical system, by Dharmarājādhvarīndra. This work is arranged (according to the kinds of proof) in 8 sections. The author mentions Velaṅgudi (properly Velaṅyudi), which is a village in the Combaconum tālūk of the Tanjore district, and of which it appears he was a native. His family, however, must have left the place, as descendants of his do not now exist there. It is supposed that he lived about the middle of the 17th century. His work was printed at Calcutta in 1847, 8vo., pp. 53, and again in 1855, in the Bengali character, also 8vo., pp. 64 (Haas, p. 31).

(5,717) D. ff. 19.

The following works profess to give an account of several Schools of Philosophy; but as this is done merely to give the superiority to the Vedānta, they are rather controversial, and, therefore, entered here.

CXLVIII. षड्दर्शनसिद्धांतसंग्रहः Shaḍdarçanasiddhāntasaṅgraha, by Rāmabhadra for Shāhārāja (i.e. Shahji of Tanjore). Granthas 900.

(9,865) Te. ll. 149.

CL. संक्षेपशंकरविजयः Saṅxepaçaṅkaravijaya, by Mādhava. This professes to be an abridgment of an older work. For a full account, see Aufrecht, i. pp. 252—260. This gives the Malayāḷam legend, but omits the fact that Çaṅkarācārya was a bastard!
(10,182) Te. ll. 129. Not inked. A recent copy. Breaks off in s. 8.

CLI. शंकरविजयः Çaṅkaravijaya, a romance (by Ānandagiri) purporting to give an account of the life and polemical discussions of Çaṅkarācārya. This seems to be a quite modern work written in the interest of the schismatic mathas on the Coromandel coast, which have renounced obedience to the Çṛiṅgeri matha, where Çaṅkarācārya's legitimate successor resides. This book has been indifferently printed in the B.I. and at Madras.
(12,365) D. ff. 49. A recent transcript; lacunæ. Ends in p. 15. For a full account of the contents see Aufrecht, i. pp. 247—252.
Among the vernacular MSS. in the Library there is a Telugu version of this work.

CLII. शंकराचार्यचरितम् Çaṅkarācāryacarita. Anon. A brief account of Çaṅkara's life, related by a Guru to his Çishya. This contains the modified Malayāḷam (or orthodox legend) as opposed to the legend given by the so-called Ānandagiri in his Çaṅkaravijaya or Çaṅkaradigvijaya. Begins:
çrīgaṇeçāya namaḥ | gaṇeçāya namas tasmai yatprasādavivasvatā | etc.

ādyuttarasya kāvyādeḥ vyāsācalabhuvo 'khilaṃ |
arthaprasūnam ādātuṃ asamartho 'ham adbhutam ||
hrasvam antyakuçagrāhyaṃ grihītvā kalayāmi tat |
nibaṃdhanasrajaṃ kāṃcit yatīçvaramanomude ||
nibaṃdhanam idaṃ puṇyam adhyāyanavakānvitaṃ |
karomi yativaryasya nideçaṃ samupāçritaḥ ||
kathāsaṃxepa evā'dyo dvitīyo 'dhyāya udbhavo |
tṛitīyo vyāsasallāpaḥ caturthaḥ çishyasaṃbhavaḥ ||
sureçvarasya çishyasya sanyāsaḥ paṃcame mataḥ |
shashṭhas tu hastāmalakatroṭakābhikhyaçishyayoḥ ||
saptame muktidāṃ ye 'nyāḥ kāñcīmāhātmyakīrtanaṃ |
rāmeçvarakathākhyānaṃ sarvapāpahare 'shṭame ||
sarvajñānanidhes tasya çaṃkarācāryayoginaḥ |
navamaḥ paramānandasāyujyavishito vidhiḥ ||

The account of his origin (f. 1*b*.) is:

purā keralamedinyāṃ kāladixetravāsinaḥ |
samīpe padmanābhasya mahān āsid (d)vijottamaḥ ||
tasya putro mahān jajñe vṛishācalanivāsinaḥ |
sarvajñasya prasādena sarvajñaḥ çaṃkarāhvayaḥ ||

This romance is full of miracles. Çaṅkarācārya's end is described as follows:

deçikendro mahāyogī stotraṃ kurvan sa vaishṇavaṃ |
viveça paramānandam bhānubiṃbāṃtarasthitaṃ ||

It ends with a litany to Çaṅkarācārya!!

This work is by no means deserving of its name; it is a sort of Vedānta sermon with scanty explanation of a few Ṛigveda texts. It begins as follows:
nārāyaṇaṃ nikhilapūrṇaguṇārṇaṃ uccasūryāmitadyutim açeshanirastadosham |
sarveçvaraṃ gurum ajeçanataṃ praṇamya vaxyāmy ṛigartham atitushṭikaraṃ tad asya ‖1‖

It is sometimes said that Madhvācārya wrote a complete C. on the Rigveda, but this is contrary to Jayatīrtha's statement, and it does not appear in the list of his works.

a. Ṭīkā, by Jayatīrtha. Gr. 4,550.

Appayadīxita's family was settled in Tiruvālaṅkādu (or Çvetāraṇya), a village in the Tanjore district, between Combaconam and Māyavaram, where his descendants in the sixth degree yet exist. There can be no question that he lived in the latter half of the 16th century. E. Logical Systems (Nyāya, Tarka).

Of this there are two distinct schools. I cannot pretend to have always succeeded in classifying the MSS. correctly.

a. Nyāya School of Gautama.

The sūtras of Gautama do not exist in an independent MS. in this Library; they have been edited with the Bhāshya (a.) in the B. I. Dr. Ballantyne has edited and translated the first four adhyāyas and part of the fifth, together with extracts from Viśvanātha's C. (Allahabad, 1850, 8vo. pp. 119). The succession of the CC. and their relation to one another was first fully determined by Professor Cowell (Kusumāñjali, preface, p. vi). Dr. Hall's views (Index) are to be somewhat modified accordingly.

a. Bhāshya, by Vātsyāyana or Paxilasvāmin. Edited in the B.I.

(2,321) D. ff. 81. Gr. 4,000. A recent and incorrect Benares MS. This is complete, though wrongly described on the cover as containing a. 5 only.

b. Nyāyavārttika, a Commentary on Vātsyāyana's C. on the Nyāyasūtra, by Pāçupatācārya-Çrīmad-uddyotakara-bhagavad Bharadvāja.[1]

(2,307) D. ff. 82. a. i. 3,700 gr. Begins:

yad acapādaḥ. [! read yad axapādaḥ] pravaro munīnāṃ çamāya çāstraṃ jagato jagāda | tārkikajñānanivṛittihetuḥ karishyate tasya mayā nibandhaḥ ‖1‖ pramāṇādipadārthatattvajñānān tri [! nih-] çreyasādhigama ity etac chāstrasyā 'dir adaṃ (r. idaṃ) sūtraṃ, etc.

(2,308) D. ff. 57. a. ii. Gr. 2,100.

a. iii. is wanting.

(2,309) D. ff. 32. a. iv. Gr. 1,123. Begins:

manaso 'nantarāmavṛittipramā parīxitavye vyatyanta āha.

(2,310) D. ff. 11. a. v. Gr. 347. Begins:

jāteḥ saṃjñeye ṇo | ktāyā vidharo vaktavya 'itī 'dam ārabhyate. sādharmyārisūtraṃ tatra jātir nāma sthāyanāhetau prayukte.

These are all precisely similar recent transcripts made at Benares by several persons about 1820. As the work is exceedingly rare, it is much to be regretted that these MSS. are so incorrect as to be useless. Whole lines are quite unintelligible, and some of the copyists seem to have been perfectly ignorant of even the form of the letters.

b1. Nyāyavārttikatātparyaṭīkā, a C. on the last, by Vācaspatimiçra.

Begins: atra bhāṇaṃ parīxitāni pramāṇāni prameyam idānīṃ parīxyata iti vṛittānukīrttanam, etc.

(2,319) D. ff. 28. a. iv. Gr. 1,550.

Begins: atha manaḥparīxānantaram upadeçakramānurodhena pravṛittiḥ.

(2,320) D. ff. 19. a. v. Gr. 754.

Begins: Pramāṇādayaḥ padārthā uddishṭā laxitāḥ parīxitāç ce 'ti tat kim aparam avaçishyate? Yadartham pañcamādhyāya ārabhyata? ity ata āha "sādharmyaivaidharmyābhyām," etc.

These MSS. are similar to those of the Nyāyavārttika, but perhaps a little more correct.

——— Tātparyaçuddhi, a C. on the last, by Udayanācārya.

(2,311) D. ff. 40. a. i. Beginning with prameyanirūpaṇa (nanu yadi prameyaṃ mumuxūṇāṃ (?) pratipitsitaṃ tad ullaṅghya kim? iti prathamataḥ pramāṇam abhihitam ity ata āha tac ce 'ti.

Gr. 1,765. Written Saṃv. 1851.

(2,312) D. ff. 44. Contains the trisūtrī section of a. i. Gr. 1,883. This forms the beginning of a. i. Begins:

mātaḥ sarasvati punar esha natvā baddhāñjaliḥ, etc.

(2,313) D. ff. 22. a. ii. Gr. 1,508.

(2,314) D. ff. 22. a. iii. Gr. 1,180.

(2,316) D. ff. 15. a. v. Gr. 734.

All these MSS. are recent Benares transcripts made by persons entirely ignorant of Sanskrit. A few words in each line may be guessed, but all the rest is utterly unintelligible.

b. Original Digests.

तत्त्वचिंतामणिः Tattvacintāmaṇi, a systematic digest of Nyāya logic, arranged according to the modes of proof, by Gaṅgeçvara-Mahopādhyāya. In 4 khaṇḍas. Kh. i. (Pratyaxakh.) begins:

Few books, however, agree in the titles or order of these topics, and many are split up into subordinate discussions. I have not been able to find a Nyāyapaṇḍita who professed to have any information on this point, and it may therefore be safely presumed that the account is a fanciful one, and the number adopted as being a sacred one. In most books the number certainly is not so high as 64, whereas Gadādhara has at least treble that amount. The 2nd vāda (prāmāṇya) begins:

[1] Uddyotakara is, therefore, merely an epithet. Cf. Cowell's Kusumāñjali, p. ix, "the pandits have a tradition that a Nyāyavārttika was written by Bhāradvāja."

atha jagad eva duḥkhapaṅkanimagnam uddidhīrshur ashṭādaça vidyāsthāneshv abhyarhitatamām ānvīxakim paramakāruṇiko muniḥ praṇināya tatra prexāvat pravṛittyartham pramāṇādipadārthatattvajñānān niḥçreyasādhigama ity ādāv sūtrayat, etc.

3. Anyathākhyātivāda: sarvajñānām yathārthatvāt pramālaxaṇe viçeshaṇasya vyāvarttyā prasiddhiḥ.
4. Pratyaxalaxaṇa: sā ca pramā caturvidhā: pratyaxānumityupamitiçabdabhedāt | evam catasṛiṇam tāsām karaṇam caturvidham | pratyaxānumānopamānaçabdabhedāt | anyeshām yathāyatham atrai 'vā 'ntarbhāvāt |
5. Sannikarshavāda: pratyaxaviçeshasannikarshaviçesho hetur anugata eva saṃyogena dravyagrahaḥ | saṃyuktasamavāyena rūpakarmagotvāder grahaṇam | saṃyuktasamavetasamavāyena rūpatvādeḥ—
6. Samavāyavāda: nanu samavāyāsiddher na sā pratyāsattiḥ vipratipattiç ca | çuklaḥ paṭa iti pratīter viçeshaṇaviçeshyasaṃbandhavishayān aveti—
7. Anupalabdhivāda: nanu bhāvagraho nai 'ndriyāt kiṃtu yogyānupalabdheḥ—
8. Abhāvavāda: nanv abhāvo 'bhāvātmai 'va tatas tatra saṃyogādir grāhaka iti na viçeshaṇatāpratyāsattiḥ—

Some of the MSS. have after this pṛithakprāmāṇyavāda, vāyupratyaxa°, suvarṇataijasa°, svaprakāça°, nirvikalpaka°, and viçeshaṇavāda, but generally the MSS. mark only the divisions mentioned above.

ii. The Anumānakhaṇḍa has been printed at Calcutta, Saṃv. 1905 (= 1848), pp. 83, 8vo. (Hall's Index, p. 29), and also in 1872—atha pratyaxopajīvyatvāt, etc.

iii. The Upamānakhaṇḍa begins: atho 'pamānam nirūpyate tatra sādriçyapramākaraṇam upamānam iti kecit sādriçyaṃ ca padārthāntaraṃ tathā hi sādriçyavyavahārād abādhitād asti sādriçyam; tac ca na pratipadārtham ekam sarvasya sarvasādriçatvāpatteḥ, etc. This section contains only about 250 gr. Printed at Calcutta, 1872, 8vo. pp. 17 (Haas).

iv. The Çabdakhaṇḍa begins:

The complete work contains about 10,000 granthas. The author is said to have lived seven centuries ago in Mithila ("Notices," i. p. 285), and his book forms the text-book of the Bengal school of Logic.

The commentaries on the Cintāmaṇi are very numerous, but, as far as I have been able to examine them, they do not afford any data for fixing even their relative chronology. Traditions are not wanting, but as they are by no means consistent, I have not attempted to arrange the CC. according to any system. The tradition which makes the Āloka (e.) the oldest C. (namely that it was written in Tirhut about five centuries ago) is perhaps correct. As regards its author, see Index, p. 38 (No. lxxvii.) and "Notices," i. p. 285, where may also be found some traditions regarding another Commentator, Mathurānātha. It is very uncertain if many of these CC. were ever completed; many appear to occur only in fragments. Should parts have perished, there is little to regret; whatever may be the merits of the original treatises, the CC. have very little. They do not make the least real advance in the science, but are chiefly occupied with mere quibbles, and are besides diffuse to an incredible extent. The Indian logical systems are complete in the sūtras of Gautuma and Kaṇāda; the original Digests have merely improved the arrangement of the subject-matter.

(10,943) Gr. ll. 138. l. 22 is wanting. Wants the beginning and the end.

Dr. Hall (p. 39) mentions a Maṇyālokakaṇṭakoddhāra, by Madhusūdana, as a C. on the Maṇi; the above work may be this, but the MS. is too defective to make it possible to ascertain its exact nature without a great waste of time.

d. Dīdhiti (also called Çiromaṇi), a C. on the Cintāmaṇi, by Raghunāthaçiromaṇi-bhaṭṭācārya. Dr. Hall (Index, p. 31) states that this extends to the first two sections of the text only, which seems very likely, as Gadādhara's Çabdakhaṇḍa is a C. on the Maṇyāloka.

kh. i. (Pratyaxa) begins: giraṃ gurūṇāṃ hṛidaye nidhāya vidhāya siddhāntāvagāhaṃ | saṃxepataḥ çrī*raghunātha*nāmā cintāmaṇer dīdhitim ātanoti ‖ prexāvatpravṛittaye phalavacchāstropakaraṇatvena, etc.

3. Gadādharī, a C. on the Dīdhiti, by Gadādhara-cakravartin, a native of the Gauḍa country. Dr. Hall (Index, p. 31) makes this a C. on the Dīdhiti only, but it appears to be partly a C. on the Dīdhiti, and partly on the Maṇyāloka, or with reference to the last.

(2,180) D. ff. 474. Uttarakhaṇḍa, about 14,000 gr. This contains the following vādas: paxatā, parāmarçā, liṅgakaraṇatā, kevalānvayi, kevalavyatireka, anvayavyatireka, avayava, (this includes pratijñālaxaṇa, hetula°-) and hetvābhāsa (this includes: sāmānyanirukti, savyabhicāra, sādhāraṇya, asādhāraṇa, anupasaṃhāri, virodha, satpratipaxa, bādha).

All these MSS. of Gadādhara are recent, and carefully written, about 1820, chiefly on European paper. Gadādhara (whose match at saying "an infinite deal of nothing" it would be difficult to find) is said, besides commentaries, to have written 64 separate dissertations on the vādas. Possibly some of the above should be separated from the general Gadādharī; such, however, as I have been able to compare with the last work, are extracts from it.

4. Jagadīçī, a C. on the Dīdhiti, by Jagadīça. According to Dr. Hall (p. 35), this only includes the Anumāna section. This begins (2,281): sasmitānanasarojam, etc.

(2,277) D. ff. 1—92. Bhūyodarçanavāda. Wants beginning.
(2,281) D. ff. 46. The beginning only of kh. ii. Recent.
(2,322) D. ff. 47—241. Do. Recent. Wants conclusion. Continuation of the last.

5. Dīdhiti-māthurī, a C. on the Dīdhiti, by Mathurānātha. This appears to cover only the second section of the text. Begins:

kuñcitādharapuṭena pūrayan, etc.
jagadguroḥ çrīrāmasya caraṇau mūrdhni dhārayan |
tatsuto mathurānātho dīdhitiṃ sphuṭayaty alam || nirvighnaprārīpsitagranthasamāpti°, etc. The author has also written an independent C. on the Cintāmaṇi. See a. (Cintāmaṇiṭīkā).
(2,149) D. ff. 176. Wants the end. Much worn.
(2,151) D. ff. 69. A fragment from the middle.
(2,152) D. ff. 12—169. A badly-written fragment, without beginning or end.

(2,139) D. ff. 14. Ākhyātavāda.

(2,163) D. ff. 2—139. Part of the Anumānakh. (ii.). Much worn.

(2,164) D.

e. Āloka, a C. on the Cintāmaṇi, by Jayadeva-Miçra, nephew of Hari-Miçra.[1] The author is also called Paxadhara. "The tradition runs that he came by it from the circumstance that when a young student, he read logic with his preceptor only once a fortnight" (Hall's Index, p. 38). Khaṇḍa i. begins:

vaktrāṇi pañcakucayoḥ prātibimbitāni dṛishṭvā daçānanasamāgamasaṃbhrameṇa | bhūyo 'pi çailaparivṛittibhayena gāḍham āliṅgito girijayā girīçaḥ punātu || adhītya jayadevena hari-miçrāt pitṛivyataḥ | tattvacintāmaṇer ittham āloko 'yaṃ prakāçyate || prasaṅgān maṅgalasya samāptihetutvaṃ vyavasthāpayitum, etc.

kh. ii. begins: amushminn etāvān aparas.

kh. iii. is wanting in all the MSS. in the Library.

kh. iv. begins: na jāne . . . . . vicaritum iha, etc.

(2,170) D. ff. 2—108. kh. i. Wants beginning and end. Much worn.

(2,171) D. ff. 489. Written about 1700. kh. i. f. 1; ii. 141*b*.; iv. 344. About 12,250 gr. A S. Indian MS. of about 1700.

(10,865) Kashm. ll. 220. Parts of the Pratyaxa and Anumāna sections, but wanting beginning and end, and in much disorder. A great many ll. appear to be wanting, and others are injured. On long slips of thick paper, with a string passed through a hole in the middle.

(10,868) Gr. ll. 167, of which 12—18, and 46—55, are wanting. kh. i. Written about 1720.

(10,869) Te. ll. 193. kh. i. and ii. A good MS. Written in the first quarter of the 17th century. A few ll. are a little broken, but this is otherwise a very good MS.

——— Avalokaṭippaṇi, notes on the last, by Gadādhara. The Gadādharī seems made up of notes on two separate CC. on the Cintāmaṇi; namely the Anumāna section of the Çiromaṇi is first annotated, and the author then, in the Çabda section, comments on the Aloka, perhaps because the last section does not exist in the former work. The Pratyaxa and Anumāna sections of the Gadādharī are unknown to me.

iv. Çabdakhaṇḍa.

(2,181) D. ff. 358. About 11,000 gr. This contains the last section complete. Begins:

praṇamya gīrvāṇaguṇaikavandyaṃ pādāravindaṃ purushottamasya | nigūḍham āvishkurute prayatnād gadādharaḥ paxadharasya bhāvaṃ || saṅgatyapradarçane mūlasya nyūnatā syād ity "atha-çabdo nirūpyata" iti pratijñāvākyād eva saṅgatir api labhyata ity āha | "athe 'tī" 'ti | athe 'ti ghaṭite 'ty arthaḥ |

This section contains the following vādas: çabdasvātantrya (including çabdalaxaṇa, padapaxakānumāna, vaiçeshikanirākaraṇa, jaranmīmāṃsakakhaṇḍana), ākāṅxā, yogyatā, āsakti, tātparya, varṇānityatva, vidhi, and apūrva.

मणिसारः Maṇisāra, by a Rāmānujācārya. This contains a criticism of the Tattvacintāmaṇisāra, and as it strictly follows the order of the text, it serves as a commentary. Begins:

(10,958) Gr. ll. 57. Illegible at beginning, and wants end. Useless.

[1] According to "Notices," i. p. 285, the author's correct name is Jayadhara Tarkālaṅkāra Miçra, and he was a native of Tirhut, and lived about five centuries ago. But this can hardly be correct as far as the name is concerned; as where I have met with references to him, he is always called Jayadeva.

तर्कभाषा Tarkabhāshā, a manual of Nyāya, by Keçava-Miçra. This excellent little work (though more copious) resembles the Tarkasaṅgraha of Annaṃ-bhaṭṭa (Vaiçeshika school), except that the order of arrangement is inverted, and it is based on the original sūtras, and is to a certain extent argumentative. Begins:

bālo 'pi yo nyāyanaye praveçām alpena vāñchaty alasaḥ çrutena | saṃxipya yuktyanvitatarkabhāshā prakāçyate tasya kṛite mayai-
'shā ‖

"Pramāṇaprameya°" (etc. Gautamas., i. 1) iti nyāyasyā 'dimaṃ sūtram; asyā 'rthaḥ; pramāṇādishoḍaçapadārthānāṃ tattvajñānān moxaprāptir bhavatī 'ti na ca pramāṇādīnāṃ tattvajñānaṃ samyagjñānaṃ tāvad bhavati yāvad eva teshām uddeçalaxaṇaparīxā na kriyante yathā 'ha Bhāshyakāraḥ, "trividhā 'sya çāstrasya pravṛittiḥ uddeço laxaṇaṃ parīxā ce" 'ti, etc.

The first part discusses pramāṇa under the usual 4 divisions (pratyaxa, anumāna, upamāna, and çabda); the second discusses prameya; then come: saṃçaya, prayojana, dṛishṭānta, siddhānta, avayava, tarka, nirṇaya, vāda, jalpa, vitaṇḍā, hetvābhāsa, chala, jāti, nigraha; thus there are 16 sthāna or topics, according to Gautama, i. 1.

b. VAIÇESHIKA SYSTEM.

A. SŪTRAS and CC.

The original sūtra of Kaṇāda and its bhāshya are not in the Library.

——— Kiraṇāvalī, a C. on the Praçastapāda-bhāshya and Kaṇāda's Vaiçeshikasūtra, by Udayanācārya. Begins:

vidyāsandhyo dayadrekād avidyārajanīxaye |
yad udeti namas tasmai kasmaicid viçvatastvishe ||
yato dravyaṃ guṇāḥ karma tathā jātiparāparā |
viçeshāḥ samavāyo vā tam īçvaram upāsmahe ||

. . . . . .

tattattāmasabhūtabhītaya imāṃ vidyāvatāṃ prītaye |
vyātene kiraṇāvalīm Udayanaḥ sattarkatejomayīm ||

Çāstrārambhe sadācārapariprāptatayā kāyavāṅmanobhiḥ kṛitaṃ parāparagurunamaskāraṃ çishyān çikayitum ādau nibadhnāti "praṇamye" 'ti.

The author enlarges on the use of a maṅgala (introductory benediction), and, among other virtues of it, states that it insures the completion of the work thus begun. As he, however, never completed this C., the Kiraṇāvalī has become a stock instance in the Maṅgalavāda section of works on Nyāya (e.g. in the Tarkadīpikā, p. 1).

(2,293) D. ff. 48. A recent S. Indian transcript, a little injured by white ants. It contains the beginning of a. i. About 1,800 gr. Ends abruptly.

B. DIGESTS.

तर्कसंग्रहः Tarkasaṅgraha, a brief and very popular manual, by Annam-bhaṭṭa. Repeatedly printed, and also translated and annotated by Dr. Ballantyne (pp. i. 63), at Allahabad, 1849. The first edition seems to have been at the beginning of this century, at a private press in the Tanjore Palace.
(2,121) D. ff. 6.

(2,122) D. ff. 6.
(10,827—10,829) Gr. Two of these MS. have notes mixed up with the text.

a. Dīpikā, by Annaṃbhaṭṭa, the author of the text. Printed at Benares, Bombay, and Madras (Tel. character). The first edition is that printed at the Tanjore Rāja's private press, between 1810 and 1820. Oblong 8vo.
(2,120) D. ff. 17.
(10,830) Gr. ll. 17.

aa. Tattvārthadīpikā, a C. on the last, by Bādhūla-Veṅkaṭaguru, son of Çrīçaila-deçika (or Çrīnivāsa). Gr. 4,600. Begins:

kastūrīkamanīyāsyaḥ karuṇākalaçodadhiḥ | kamalākamalo raṅgī karotu karuṇāṃ mayi ‖ 1 ‖
phalaṃ yaḥ saptarshipramukhataṭapasāṃ prādur abhavan nṛisiṃhaḥ saṃhṛishyan nṛitati ghaṭikādrau vasati yaḥ |

(2,124) D. ff. 100. A carefully made copy, written in a S. Indian hand, on European paper, about 1800.

Annaṃbhaṭṭa's work has been repeatedly annotated, and even the commentaries have found commentators. A list of several current in N. India has been given by Dr. Hall (in Ballantyne's Tarkasaṅgraha), but it is by no means complete. The first above (e.g.) is not in it.

भाषापरिच्छेदः Bhāshāpariccheda, an elementary treatise on Logic, etc., by Viçvanāthapañcānana. Edited, with a translation by Dr. Röer, in the B. I. This is a popular work everywhere, and was first printed at Tanjore about 1810, at the Rāja's private press. 8vo. 10 ff.
(2,123) D. ff. 8.
(2,306) D. ff. 6.
(12,293) D. ff. 9.

तर्कामृतम् Tarkāmṛita, an elementary treatise on the Vaiçeshika system, by Jagadīça. Begins:

atha çrutiḥ çrūyate, "ātmā vā are drashṭavyaḥ çrotavyo mantavyo nididhyāsitavya" etc. asyā 'rthaḥ: mumuxuṇā ātmā drashṭavyaḥ mumuxor ātmadarçanaṃ ishṭasādhanaṃ iti yāvat, etc. About 350 gr.

Ends: evaṃ diçā sarvatra bodhyam.

This little treatise is not popular, though it seems superior to the Tarkasaṅgraha.

The sections are: apratyaxapratyaxadravyāṇi; dravyotpattiprakriyā; dravyapramāṇa; dravyanāçaprakriyā; guṇāḥ; guṇotpattiprakriyā; pramā (caturvidhā).

(2,287) D. ff. 7. A very carefully made recent transcript, on European paper, of about 1820.

——— Tarkāmṛitacashaka, a C. on the last, by Gaṅgārāma. Begins:

ātmarūpaguṇanṛityakāriṇe locanākalitatattvasāxiṇe |

(2,273) D. ff. 35. A recent MS. Wants apparently the conclusion.

——— Kāṇādarahasya, a C. on the last, by the author of the text.

सप्तपदार्थचन्द्रिका Saptapadārthacandrikā, a treatise on the Categories, by Çeshānanta (?).

(2,291) D. ff. 12—78. Wants beginning. Injured by white ants.

svīkṛitakupitayaçodā . . . ragodāmabandhanavyasanaṃ |
nalinīdalasukumāraṃ nandakumāraṃ namasyāmaḥ ‖

(2,289) D. ff. 69. Written about 1700. Gr. 2,400.

(2,290) D. ff. 98. A recent transcript. Damaged by white ants.

——— Padārthamālāprakāça, a C. on the last, by Bhāskara, son of Mudgala, of the Laugādigotra (? Laugāxi). Gr. 3,770. Begins:

çrīvāsadevasuravairibhaṅgaramādharāliṅgitasundarāṅgaṃ |

(2,285) D. ff. 117. A recent transcript of about 1800.

——— Padārthacandrikāṭippaṇi, by Keçavabhaṭṭa. Begins:

I am unable to ascertain on what work this is a C. 1,300 gr.

(2,265) D. ff. 60. Written about 1700. Much injured by damp.

——— Mitabhāshiṇī, a C. on Çivāditya's Saptapadārthanirūpaṇa, by Mādhavasarasvatī. See "Index," p. 75, No. xliii.

(2,226*) D. ff. 62. Written about 1700. The first page completely obliterated. Carelessly written, and damaged.

nāthaḥ sṛijaty avati yo jagadekaputraprītyā tataḥ paramanirvṛitim ādadhāti | tasmai namaḥ, etc.

(10,968) Te. ll. 93. Illegibly copied from next, about 1700.

(12,351) D. ff. 114. A N. Indian MS. of about 1700; carefully corrected.

Ends: prakriyāpariccheḍas turīyaḥ. Gr. 2,200.

——— Nyāyalīlāvatīçiromaṇi, a ṭīkā on the last, by ——— ?, pupil of Gaṅgeçvara, his father. Begins:

ekatra çūlam aparatra visaprasūnaṃ anyatra kṛittir aparatra ca pītavāsaḥ | tat pātu, etc.

This is probably Vardhamāna's C. ("Notices," iii. p. 47), but the beginning is not the same. There are several CC. on the Līlāvatī.

(12,352) D. ff. 305. A N. Indian MS. of the end of the 17th century. Injured, and wants end. Gr. 4,000.

न्यायकौमुदी Nyāyakaumudī, an elementary treatise by Veṅkaṭarāma. Begins:

natvā kaivalyadaṃ brahma smṛitvā guruvaco niçaṃ |

a. Padārthakhaṇḍanaṭippaṇi, a C. on Raghunātha's Padārthakhaṇḍana, which is (according to Index, p. 80, No. lxiii.) a criticism of the Vaiçeshika categories, by (Rāmabhadra)-sārvabhaumabhaṭṭācārya. Gr. 800. Begins:

jātasya tarkasarasiruhakānaneshu carāmaṇer dinamaṇeç caraṇau praṇamya |

(2,302) D. ff. 28. A recent N. Indian MS.

कुसुमांजलिः Kusumāñjali, 72 stanzas containing the Nyāya proof of the existence of a Supreme Being, against the Mīmāṃsists, Vedāntists, and followers of the Sāṅkhya and Buddhist systems, by Udayanācārya. The last edition, together with Haridāsa's C. and an admirable English translation, is by Prof. E. B. Cowell. 8vo. Calcutta, 1864. There are a great many CC. on the text. See Prof. Cowell's edition, p. xi, and "Index," pp. 82—84. The text is reputed to be one of the most difficult books in the Sanskrit philosophical literature.

——— Kusumāñjalikārikāvyākhyā, by Haridāsabhaṭṭācārya.

(6,370) D. ff. 3—24. Wants the beginning,—St. 1—3, in which the MS. commences abruptly. Written in the first half of the last century.

——— Nyāyakusumāñjaliṭīkā, notes on Haridāsa's C., by Varadarāja, son of Rāmadevamiçra. Dr. Hall (Index, p. 83, No. lxxvi.) seems to be in error about this work. The names here are repeated at the end of each pariccheda, and are perfectly clear; it cannot therefore well be the same as Vardhamāna Upādhyāya's commentary.

(10,916) Gr. ll. 170. Written about 1600. Wants the beginning and end, and terribly injured in parts.

(10,915) Gr. ll. 198. A transcript (about the end of the last century) of the preceding MS. Like the original, it wants the beginning and end, and is also full of lacunæ, owing to the defects in the original.

P. ii. begins, l. 61:

atha dvitīyaṃ paricchedam ārabhamāṇas tannirākaraṇīyām ātmaçaṅkām utthāpayitum yathā sādhitapūrveṇā 'pūrveṇe 'çvarasiddhis tathā darçayati "tad evam" iti—vighn . . . ye vihitaṃ maṅgalam, etc.

(2,275) D. ff. 54. Complete. Written about 1750. Much worn in parts. 1,150 gr.

(10,964) NN. ll. 40. A fragment of some treatise.

F. Buddhistic and Jaina Systems.

अवैदिकदर्शनसंग्रहः Avaidikadarçanasaṅgraha, by Gaṅgādharavājapeyayājin. Begins:

natvā viçuddhavijñānaṃ daxiṇāmūrttim īçvaraṃ |

iha hi bhagavatā buddhamuninā vaidikamārgaviplāvanāya catvāri matāny uttamamadhyamādhamabhedena pravartitāni; tatra bāhyārthāstitvavādino nikṛishṭamatayaḥ—

The four schools of Buddhism are briefly explained, and the work ends with an account of the opinions of the Jains, ending:

itthaṃ matānāṃ pañcānāṃ vedamārgavirodhinām |
siddhāntasāraḥ saṃxipya darçito vidushāṃ mude ‖

(6,502) D. ff. 15. Written at Benares about 1820.

For other lists of the Smṛitis and details, vide Weber's I.S. i. pp. 232 ff.; Stokes' Hindu Law Books, p. 5, note; and Bühler and West's Digest, p. xiii ffg. A collection (in 2 vols.) of these Smṛitis was printed in Calcutta (1876), containing 26; these are referred to as "S." A collection of 19 was also printed many years ago, at Calcutta, by Bhavānīcaraṇa, in the Bengālī character. See Gildemeister, 297 ff.

mucyante pātakair yuktās tan no brūhi mahāmune ||

a. v. 1 states:

na strī dūshyate jāreṇa, na vipro vedapāragaḥ |
nā 'po mūtrapurīsheṇa, nā 'gnir dahanakarmaṇā ||

The third is quite the Indian idea, and fully carried out in spite of sanitary commissioners; in other respects, too, this verse is followed.

b. Manvarthacandrikā, a C. on the Mānavadharmaçāstra, by Rāghavānanda Sarasvatī, pupil of Viçveçvarabhagavatpāda. Begins:

ānandam ajaraṃ brahma sarvānarthavivarjitaṃ |

kullūkanārāyaṇasaṃmatāni govindamedhātithihṛidgatāni |
jñātvā ca vedādikaṃ ākalayya manor mana(ḥ)sthaṃ prakaṭīkaromi ‖

The author is a strenuous supporter of the authority of his text, which he puts before all the other smṛitis. The 12 chapters contain about 10,000 granthas.

The text of Manu has been repeatedly printed, both in India and Europe. The C. of Kullūka has been printed at Calcutta in 1813 (Gildemeister, 27), 1830 (do. 429), 1833 (do. 431) and 1867. At Bombay (Çak. 1780), and at Madras (in the Telugu character), 4to. It is not at all too much to say, however, that it has never as yet been edited. A new edition of the text is also much wanted, but this, after the publication of Dr. Johaentgen's essay ("Ueber das Gesetzbuch des Manu," 1863) will be a comparatively easy matter. The translations by Jones and Deslongchamps are well known.

XVIII. यमस्मृतिः Yamasmṛiti. Begins:

XXXIII. लघुहारीतस्मृतिः Hārītasmṛiti (laghu). a. Begins:

Mārkaṇḍeya then relates what Hārīta formerly said to the ṛishis on the subject. About 200 granthas in 7 chapters. S. i. pp. 177—193.

prāyāçcittam cikitsārtham etat prāhur manīshiṇaḥ ||

So far as I have been able to collate some of these MSS. with S., I have found that they furnish an immense number of corrections or better readings. The texts in S. seem to have been often printed, without care, from a single and indifferent MS.

II. Nibandhas or Digests and Compilations.

General Digests.

I. आचारनवनीतम् Ācāranavanīta, by Appaya. Begins:

This was composed in the time of king Çahaji (1684—1711), who is also mentioned. The author seems to have been a native of a place some 10 miles S. of Tanjore. His treatise is entirely S. Indian in its prescriptions. The part existing here contains about 10,000 gr. It is very diffuse.

1. Vratakhaṇḍa. Begins:

2. Dānakhaṇḍa. Begins:

mahato niçākarakarāvrātavratam vibhratā । dantadyotitaḍinmukhena hasitenā 'nandayantaṃ çivau[illegible]

Gr. 5,100.

(218) D. ff. 247.
(219) D. ff. 189. anukr. 2 ff.
(228) D. ff. 140. A N. Indian MS.

All these MSS. contain only the first part; a Gotrapravaranirṇaya should follow.

This work may be assigned to the end of the 17th century, as the author quotes the compiler of the "Tristhalīsetu," i.e. Bhaṭṭojidīxita, who appears to have been his guru. Besides, he mentions (iv. 6 ffg.) Medhātithi, Aparārka, Vijñāneçvara, the Smṛityarthasāra, the Kālādarça, Candrikākara (i.e. author of the Smṛiticandrikā), Hemādri, Mādhava, Narasiṃha, as his authorities. He follows the Dāxiṇātyamata, and relies much on the Purāṇas and Tantras.

This part treats entirely of doubtful matters on ceremonial usages, beginning with the navarātra, and similar ceremonies on particular days, and then treating of questions of āçauca, and ending with regular ceremonies. The only doubtful question likely to prove of interest is one relative to adoption which arises out of a verse quoted from Çaunaka (? Gṛihyapariçishṭa) in the Prayogapārijāta, and which incidentally occurs in the section on Sapiṇḍīkaraṇa.

Bhaṭṭaçaṅkara says on this:

tatra kecic 'chūdrasyai' 'va imau dvau, na 'anyasya' brāhmaṇāder iti niyamaṃ pratipedire tan na . . . . . tena brāhmaṇādibhir api dauhitrabhāgineyau putratvena grāhyāv iti siddham; tathā çūdreṇa sati saṃbhave dauhitrabhāgineyāv eva grāhyau.

Therefore, Brahmins may (in case of necessity) adopt a daughter's or sister's son, and this adoption is legal by very good authority, though in opposition to the received law. It seems to be a Southern usage, and is at once explained by the situation of the settlements of Brahmans in S. India, which are broken up to a wonderful extent by sects and divisions. Bhaṭṭaçaṅkara's conclusion is, however, deduced by strict Mīmāṃsā reasoning. The Dattanirṇaya (contrary to all the other treatises on adoption) teaches this also.

VI. धर्मप्रदीपः Dharmapradīpa, by Panicambala-Purushottama's son. Begins:

namaskṛitya gaṇeçaṃ ca vyāsādisakalān munīn |
dharmapravṛittiko vākyanirṇayo likhyate 'dhunā |

(149) D. ff. 3—179, the first two ll. being wanting. Begins with ācāra, and ends with prāyaçcitta.

(150) D. ff. 35. Beginning only; a recent, careless transcript, but contains the first two ll.
(151) D. ff. 203. A recent transcript of No. 149.

VII. धर्मप्रवृत्तिः Dharmapravṛitti, by Nārāyaṇa Bhaṭṭa. Begins:

gaṇanāthaṃ gurūṃç cā 'pi dharmasaṃraxaṇāya vai ||
dharmapravṛittiḥ kriyate kalau nārāyaṇena tu | etc.

This treatise (chiefly used in the Telugu country) comprehends ācāra, saṃskāra, çrāddha, and dāna. The compiler has relied on Manu and the other dharmaçāstras, the Açvalāyanasūtra and Nārāyaṇa's C. on it. 3,600 gr.

(294) D. ff. 237. A recent transcript.
(295) D. ff. 9. An abstract of the Āhnika part of the above.

VIII. धर्मसारः Dharmasāra, by Prabhākara (sic label).

(347) D. ff. 46. Miçrakāṇḍa only. A fragment of some modern digest.

धर्मसिन्धुसारः Dharmasindhusāra, by Kāçināthopādhyāya, of Anantopādhyāya. Begins:

asaṃhatisindhuçosham |

This contains 3 paricchedas—(1) Sāmānyakālanirṇáya; (2) on ceremonies for the days of the year, etc.; (3) Saṃskāra. It comprehends about 10,000 gr. By an entry on f. 67 of p. ii. (No. 396) it appears that this book was written in Saṃv. 1715; it is a mere copy of earlier digests.

(396) D. ff. 250. p. iii.
(397) D. ff. 41, 92, and 356. All 3 paricchedas, but pp. 2 and 3 want the respective ends.

X. धर्मसुबोधिनी Dharmasubodhinī, by Nārāyaṇa. This is a modern compilation from the works of Vijñāneçvara, Mādhava and the Madanaratna. It is chiefly in Mahraṭha.

Nṛisiṃha's "Prayogapārijāta," as far as one can judge by the fragments in this Library, is by no means rich in quotations, nor are the works quoted of interest. He quotes occasionally the Smṛiticandrikā. This work (owing to its great diffuseness) has been superseded in use by the Prayogaratna. It cannot be earlier or later than the 12th century.

XV. भगवन्तभास्कर: Bhagavantabhāskara, by Nīlakaṇṭhabhaṭṭa. Composed about 1600, at Bhareha (at the confluence of the Jamnā and Chambal), under the protection (435) D. ff. 99. anukr., recent, 3 ll. Written about 1650. This MS. is much broken, and is so fragile that the leaves will hardly bear handling.

The Vyavahāramayūkha was edited at Bombay in 1826; it and the Pratishṭhāmayūkha have been lithographed at Bombay, and the Prāyaçcittamayūkha has been lithographed at Benares. The last edition of Borradaile's translation of the Vyavahāramayūkha is in Stokes's "Hindu Law Books" (Madras).

XVI. मदनपारिजातः Madanapārijāta, by Viçveçvara, son of Peḍḍibhaṭṭa. Composed for Madanapāla, probably in the 15th century. The introductory first 22 verses have been given in Aufrecht, i. pp. 274–5. About 7,500 granthas.

(119) D. ff. 180. A S. Indian MS. Written at the end of the 18th century.
The 9 "Stavakas" (in çlokas) are as follows:—
i. Brahmacāridharmaḥ, f. 1.
ii. Vivāhaḥ and Strīdharmaḥ, 34.
iii. Āhnikāni, 45.
iv. Garbhādhānādisaṃskārāḥ, 97.

vii. Çrāddhavicāraḥ, 121.
viii. Dāyavibhāgaḥ, 151*b*.
ix. Prāyaçcittāni, 154.

The section on partition is the only one likely to attract attention; it consists chiefly of a selection of verses from Yājñavalkya, with here and there a meagre note, and contains nothing new. The whole work is a wretched specimen of book-making.

manvādipraṇītānām eva dharmaçāstrāṇāṃ vedamūlatvāt tāny eva dharmapramāṇānī 'ti tadadhigamopayogitayā tacchāstrapraṇetāraḥ pradarçyante, etc.

This is a large digest—about 15,000 gr.—in three sections—ācāra, saṃskāra, and kāla; the writer is inclined to liberal views, and quotes the following verse from the Vishṇu-dharmottara:

svagrāme pūrṇam ācāram, anyagrāme tadardhakam |
paṭṭane pādam ācāram, pathi çūdravad ācaret || (! !)

It includes Çūdrācāra.

(9,461) Te. ll. 363. Written in axaya year (? last century).

XXIII. स्मृतिकौमुदी Smṛitikaumudī, by Rāya Madanapāla. Begins:

namas sakalakalyāṇakāraṇāya pinākine |
namo laxmīnivāsāya, devatāyai girāṃ namaḥ ||
apatyavātsalyavaçād udīrṇaṃ stanyaṃ pipāsur girijākucāgre |
muhuḥ karāgraṃ calayann ibhāsyo manorathān naḥ sa phalīkarotu ||

Of this work there is here only the first part on ācāra. It refers only to çūdras, whom the author divides into two classes (1) original çūdras (paramapurushasya caraṇabhūtaḥ kevalaçūdraḥ) as originally created, and (2) çūdras born of marriages between twice-born men and çūdra women (aparo dvijātibhyaḥ pariṇītaçūdrāyām utpannaḥ). These last he puts down as superior (in some cases) to the former; or, in other words, that they have more ceremonies to perform. It is remarkable that so late a book should refer to such marriages.

The author gives the following list of his ancestors—Ratnapāla, Bharahapāla, Hariçcandra, Vadānya, (?) whose son he was.

(123) D. ff. 126. ācāra section only. A S. Indian transcript of about 1800.

(12,315) D. ff. 51. Beginning only. A recent S. Indian transcript.

XXIV. स्मृतिचन्द्रिका Smṛiticandrikā, by Devaṇṇa Bhaṭṭa. The author's name shows that he was a Telugu; Devāṇḍa is a N. Indian and erroneous form.

a. Saṃskārakāṇḍa. 6,300 granthas. Begins:

jagataḥ pralayotpattisthitibhūtāya jishṇave |

A discussion on the authority of the smṛitis follows. names 36 authors of smṛitis on the authority of Paiṭhīnasi.

The Dāyabhāga part of this section was printed at Calcutta in 1870. An edition and translation was long in course of preparation by the late Dr. Goldstücker. A translation has also been published at Madras (1869).

Devaṇṇabhaṭṭa quotes the Mitāxarā, Saṅgraha, Aparārka, and Bhoja; he cannot have lived, therefore, before the 10th century, and as he is quoted in the Prayogapārijāta, he cannot be later than the 12th century.

In the Vyavahārakāṇḍa he mentions a Bhāshya on the Āpastambadharmasūtra.

(610) b. D. ff. 407. Recent. A S. Indian transcript.
(9,303) Gr. ll. 50.

The "Smṛitimuktāphala" is the great authority in S. India. Its author is said to have lived about 1600. This Digest is merely an imitation of the "Smṛiticandrikā," and similar earlier works, with the addition of some topics not noticed or treated briefly in them, and adapted especially to the followers of the Black Yajurveda and S. Indian ācāra. The author appears to have abridged it, and several other epitomes of it exist (see the next MS). The topic of vyavahāra was (apparently) neglected by Vaidyanātha.

——— 'Āhnikasaṃxepa,' by Çivarāma. An abridgment of Vaidyanātha's Ahnika (? section ii. of the original work). About 1,500 granthas. Begins:

(9,158) a. Te. l. 1. Written about 1650. Incorrect.
Begins: atha strīṇām anugamanavidhim karishye | praveçaç cā 'nugamanaṃ strīṇāṃ eva vidhismṛitam amantrakaṃ tu çūdrāyā(ḥ) praveço vidhīyate | yasya kasya brāhmaṇasya maraṇakāle sati tatpatnī maṅgalasnānaṃ kṛitvā dhautavastraṃ paridhāyā 'camya gandhapushpāxatān dhṛitvā brāhmaṇān āhūya: "evaṃguṇe 'tyādipuṇyatithau vishṇurūpeṇa bhartrā saha agnipraveçanaṃ karishye" iti saṃkalpya darbhāxatasahitaṃ jalam aṅjalau dhṛitvā pativratā etc.
The "Lettres Édifiantes" show that this custom was much followed by the Telugu Nāyaks and Mahraṭhas, but not by the people of S. India. It seems to have never been allowed by S. Indian (Tamil) Brahmans, and it is (by the Anācāranirṇaya) forbidden to the Brahmans of Malabar.

All the MSS. in the Library break off in the Vinoda (fourth) part, and present many lacunæ. This book is in very unadorned çlokas; the subdivisions are not marked, and, sometimes, only comprise a single verse.

LXIV. मेघसन्देशः Meghasandeça, by Kālidāsa. This well-known poem is usually called Meghadūta, but the above name, resting on the authority of all S. Indian MSS. of both the text and also of the commentary by Mallinātha, seems preferable. It was first edited by Wilson, at Calcutta, in 1813, and since then, there is a critical edition by Gildemeister (Bonn, 1841). Mallinātha's C. (called "Saṃjīvanī") has been printed at Bombay, twice at Benares, and also in the Telugu character at Madras (8vo., 1863). It divides the poem into two parts, the pūrva and uttara-megha; the first containing 67, and the last 54, stanzas (No. 4,784). Of the text (as given by Gildemeister) it rejects stanza 104, and adds three between 32 and 33; two stanzas between 66 and 67; one stanza after 67; one stanza after 71; one stanza after 73; and one after 111. The pūrva-megha ends with stanza 64 of the printed edition. A final, critical edition of the text has, at last, been brought out by Stenzler (1874). In this the spurious verses are put separately at the end of the text.

The Meghasandeça is one of the Sanskrit poems translated into Tibetan in the great collection called Bstanḥgyur. As regards Mallināṭha's statement in his C. on st. 14, that the great Buddhist teacher Diṅnāga is there alluded to, see Z. d. D. M. G. xxii. p. 726. Also Wassiljew's "Der Buddhismus." Seven CC. on this little poem are in existence, see Aufrecht, i. p. 125*b*., and "Notices," i. p. 117.

Some MSS. attribute this poem to a Kālidāsa and Laxmaṇa Kavi jointly; the MSS. in this collection, however, attribute the first five kāṇḍas to Vidarbharāja (i.e. Bhoja), and the last to Laxmaṇa. Begins:

LXXXIII. विश्वगुणादर्शः Viçvaguṇādarça, by Veṅkaṭācārya. The author was a native of Conjeveram, and lived about 1600. His work is almost the only modern S. Indian production that shows the least originality. This work is an imaginary voyage over India by two gandharvas, one of whom praises, while the other decries, all they see. It has been translated after a fashion, Calcutta, 1825, and has been several times printed. See Haas, p. 158.

The remarks on the Portuguese (whom the author terms Hūṇa) at St. Thomé are curious:

In blame:

II. पंचतंत्रम् Pañcatantra. Of this famous collection of tales, the N. Indian MSS. present forms of an artistic and longer recension. Besides this, there exists a shorter recension in the South of India, which is the nearest Indian form yet found to the versions through which these tales came to Europe. The compiler of this Catalogue first drew attention to this shorter recension in 1868 (Z. d. D. M. G. vol. xxii. p. 327), and Professor Benfey also noticed its importance in 1872 (Academy, iii. p. 139), and again in his preface to Bickell's edition of the very old Syriac version—"Kalilag und Damnag" (1876) p. xi.

a. Shorter (S. Indian), or primitive, recension. This begins:

granthavistarabhīrūṇām bālānām alpacetasām |
bodhāya pañcatantrākhyam idaṃ saṅgṛihya kathyate ||

The king here is Sudarçana of Pāṭaliputra, and his sons are taught by Vishṇuçarman. As a specimen, I shall give (from T. i.) the short tale of the tortoise and geese, corrected from a better MS. in my own possession.

mitrāṇāṃ yo hitavākyaṃ nā 'bhinandati mūḍhadhīḥ |
sa kūrma iva durbuddhiḥ kāshṭhād bhrashṭo vinaçyati ||

tittibhaḥ: katham etat? | sa āha: atha kasmiṃçcit sarasi kambugrīvo nāma kacchapaḥ prativasati sma, tasya dvau suhṛidau vikaṭasaṅkaṭanāmānau haṃsau tatrai 'va vasataḥ | tāv anāvṛishṭiparixīṇāv anyonyam ūcatuḥ: idam alpapānīyaṃ saraḥ: anyajalāçayam açoshyaṃ gacchāvaḥ! idaṃ tu priya-suhṛit kambugrīvaḥ kathyatām iti | kathite ca sati, teno 'ktam: yuvām paxicāriṇau mayā deçāntaraṃ katham gantavyam iti? tāv ūcatuḥ: tvaṃ yady asmadvacanān na calasi, tadā tvām api nayāvaḥ | āvābhyām priyasuhṛit! tvaṃ nayamānaḥ kim api na vadishyasi! ity uktvā yashṭim ānīya gaditaḥ: imāṃ yashṭim madhye gāḍhaṃ gṛihāṇa! āvām apy antayor gṛihītvā yāsyāvaḥ | evam ācarite pratyāsanne nagare tad apūrvaṃ dṛishṭvā janāiḥ: kim idam? iti kalakalaḥ kṛitaḥ | tacchrutvā so 'bravīt: ko 'yaṃ kalakala? ity ucyamāna eva kāshṭhād bhrashṭo nipatitaḥ | māṃsalubdhair vyāpāditaç ca | ato 'ham bravīmi . . . . ||

b. Northern, or longer recension. Kosegarten has edited one form of the N. recension, and part of another. The last edition is in the "Bombay Series," by Bühler and Kielhorn. The N. Indian copies differ vastly from one another. On the history of these tales, etc., see Benfey's "Pantschatantra: Fünf Bücher indischer fabeln . . . übersetzt . . . u. s. w." 2 vols. 8vo., 1859.

(5,114) D. ff. 87. Written Saṃv. 1735. A N. Indian MS. Incorrect.
(5,115) D. ff. 22 to 205. A yet more diffuse form. Wants T. i. up to çl. 163.

III. बृहत्कथामंजरी Bṛihatkathāmañjarī, by Xemendra. The author, who was a native of Cashmere, wrote 1020—40 (I. S. xiv. p. 407). This collection of tales was put into less bald verse and was re-arranged by Somadeva in his Kathāsaritsāgara. The present work was unknown till I drew attention to it in 1871 (Academy, 15th Sept., 1871, p. 447). Professor Bühler gave an account of it in the Indian Antiquary from another MS. (i. pp. 302 ffg). The

MSS. here are not complete, but that in Dr. Bühler's possession (also imperfect) supplies what is wanting. Begins:

The books, so far as they are found here, of the Bṛihatkathāmañjarī correspond as follows with those of the Kathāsaritsāgara. i.—v. (Bṛihatk.) agree with 1—2 (Kathās.); vi. = 8; vii. = 6; viii. = 11; ix. = 12; x. = 18; xi. = 13; xii. = 17; xiii. = 14; xiv. = 7; xv. = 9; xvi. = 10.

(4,879) D. ff. 282. Ends in xiv. with duḥçīlakhyāyikā. Gr. 7,680.

(4,880) D. ff. 365. ii. begins f. 25*b*.; iii.—49; iv.—72; v.—80*b*.; vi.—95*b*.; vii.—109*b*.; viii.—145*b*.; ix.—149*b*.; x.—279*b*.; xi.—296; xii. = 300; xiii.—306; xiv.—316*b*.

In this MS. 56 is repeated in the numbering. Occasional lacunæ are the same in both MSS., and a comparison of these (e.g. ff. 12*b*. and 18) will prove that they were both copied from the same original. These lacunæ are numerous towards the end.

(10,231) NN. ll. 274. Probably the original of the last.

For other MSS. of the Vetāla stories (in book ix.) see under No. v, Vetālapañcaviṃçati, b.

IV. विक्रमार्कचरितम् Vikramārkacarita, or Dvātrimçatsālabhañjikā. This favourite collection of rather insipid tales exists in several vernacular versions; the original presents also many different recensions. The best known is the prose recension (with çlokas here and there) printed at Madras in 1861 in the Telugu character (89 pp. 8vo.), but unfortunately so incorrectly as to be but of little use.[1] A second recension may be called the verse recension (? the Tantric recension of Aufrecht, i. p. 152), being entirely in çlokas. The preface is here divided into seven lāpinikā; the tales then follow nearly in the same order as in the prose recension, but told more simply, and generally more briefly. Many of the verses introduced in the prose recension here form part of the text, but they are very seldom the same, word for word, in both recensions. The commencement of the verse recension is as follows:

purā laṅkeçvarabhujā keyūranikashopale |
çaile çailendrasutayā jagade jagadīçitā ‖
deva citrakathāḥ kāçcid antarālasya mocanīḥ | mahyaṃ çuçrūshave brūhi manaḥprahlādinīḥ çubhāḥ ‖
atho 'vāca mahādevo bhavānīṃ prītamānasaḥ | çaraccandrāṃçunishyandasudhāmadhurayā girā ‖
asti siṃhāsanaṃ kiṃcid guhanīyaṃ mahattaram |
paritas tasya vidyante dvātriṃçat sālabhañjikāḥ ‖
kadācid ucite kāle kalākuçalasaṃkule | bhojarājasabhāmadhye kathayanti sma tāḥ kathāḥ ‖
devy uvaca | kasye 'dam āsanaṃ deva? kiṃ divyaṃ rūpalaxaṇam? | kutra sthānam abhūt pūrvaṃ? vaçe kasya mahīpateḥ? ‖
prāpa bhojamahīpālaḥ kasmād etad varāsanam? |
tac citram iva me bhāti pūrvam ārabhya me vada! |
evam ukto mahādevo babhāshe dantakāntibhiḥ ‖
maulicandramasaḥ kurvann ākasmikamahotsavam |
iti siṃhāsanadvātriṃçatsālabhañjikāyāṃ prathamā lāpanikā |

(Then begins the story).

asti vistṛitasaṃpattiḥ pṛithvīmaṇḍalamaṇḍanam |
suparvālayasaubhāgyaṃ jayany ujjayanī purī ‖ etc.

There can be little doubt that this verse-recension is based on the prose text, and after the model of the Kathāsaritsāgara, or Bṛihatkathāmañjarī, whence the introduction has been imitated. The writer seems soon to have got tired of his task, as he tells the stories in a very rude way, and leaves out all that he could not easily turn into indifferent çlokas. To neither the prose nor verse recension is an author assigned. A brief prose version (attributed to a Vararuci, and called Siṃhāsanadvātriṃçatikā), is described in Aufrecht, ii. pp. 11 ffg. There is also a fourth (Jain) recension,[1] see Aufrecht, i. p. 152.

(5,105) D. ff. 121. A recent S. Indian transcript, on paper of different colours. Corrected, but not accurately.

(5,106) D. ff. 109. As far as the 25th tale only.

(5,107) D. ff. 87. Story 3—25. ff. 13 and 14 are wanting.

(10,221) Gr. ll. 65. The first 2 ll. have been replaced; the rest were written early in the last century.

(10,218) b. Gr. ll. 57*b*.—104. Breaks off in Tale 32. Written about 1700.

(10,222) Gr. ll. 102, of which ll. 45—59 are missing. Written about 1750.

These MSS. all exhibit the verse-recension.

V. वेतालपंचविंशतिः Vetālapañcaviṃçati, a popular collection of 25 tales, which exists in all the vernacular dialects of India, and in Sanskrit in at least four redactions. The first is in prose by a Çivadāsa, the second by Jambhaladatta,[2] the third (in the Kathāsaritsāgara) by Somadeva, in çlokas, and the fourth (also in çlokas) by Xemendra, in the Bṛihatkathāmañjarī. In this Library we have only an imperfect copy of the first, and several copies of the fourth redaction. Beyond the bare matter of the stories (or rather of some of them), these different redactions have nothing in common. The production of a modern pedant is based on them (see Vikramasenacampū).

a. Çivadāsa's redaction.

(5,104) D. ff. 44, of which ff. 29 and 30 are wanting. This MS. comes from N. India, and is probably about 100 years old. It bears on the cover the impress of a Persian seal, but too faint to be deciphered. Very incorrect. Breaks off in the sixth story. Most of the few verses quoted occur in the Hitopadeça, or are taken from Bhartṛihari. This has been translated by Dr. Luber (8vo. Görz, 1875); part of the text is in Lassen's "Anthologia"; and a critical study of the sixteenth tale, by Dr. Zachariae, is in Bezzenberger's "Beiträge," iv.

[1] Transpositions of letters occur perpetually; m and s, v and p, etc., are continually interchanged in a way that often destroys all sense, e.g. (p. 73, line 11) grāmaṃ (for grāsaṃ!) me pathikāya dehi subhage!

[1] By Xemaṅkara, Hall's Vāsavadattā, p. 54 of the introduction. Professor Weber has discussed this in great detail, I. S. xv. pp. 185—453.

[2] Aufrecht, i. 152*a*.

b. Xemendra's redaction.

(5,103) D. ff. 82. Written about the middle of the last century.

(10,218) a. Gr. ll. 5—57*b*. Wants beginning and end. Worm-eaten.

(10,219) Te. ll. 73. As far as Story 22 only. Written about 1650. Much worm-eaten.

(10,220) Gr. ll. 59. Ends abruptly with the first line of Story 23. The first part clearly written about 1700. The last part more recent, and much worm-eaten.

(10,232) Gr. ll. 26. Imperfect.

VI. शुकसप्तति: Çukasaptati. Prose and verse, about 2,640 gr. Begins:

sadbhyo yathārham abhipūjya sapradaxiṇam praṇāmaṃ nirmāya |

ātmānaṃ putravishayiṇaṃ kartum upakrame medinīnāyaka-priyaḥ ||

bho! tatrabhavato bhavantaḥ! pratyekaço bṛihaspatisamānavaibhavaḥ tarhi mama saṃpattir atiçāyinī nā 'haṃ dhanasya vidyamānasya saṅkhyāṃ kalayāmi.

(5,108) D. ff. 165. kathās 65—7 are wanting. ff. 158*b*. and 159 are left blank. k. 68 begins: tasmin vaṭe ulūkā vasanti, kadācana rātrau . . . . . Ends: iti kathākoçe çu°—sa.°

(12,341) D. ff. 93. A recent copy. Breaks off in k. 58.

These stories are known by versions in many languages. For a very complete account, see Dr. Pertsch's article, "Ueber Nachschabi's Papagaienbuch" in Z. d. D. M. G. xxi. pp. 505—551.

This has been printed (not satisfactorily) in vol. vii. of the "Pandit." The MSS. of the text and C. in this Library are not sufficient, according to Professor Pischel (to whom copies were sent), to restore the text.

The name of the author is there given as Xemeçvara, but the MSS. in this Library agree in calling him Xemendra. Whether he be the same as the author of the Bṛihatkathāmañjarī or not, there are here no means to decide. A Xemendra is often quoted as a famous poet. Begins:

XXXIX. भानुप्रबंधः Bhānuprabandha, a prahasana, by Veṅkateça. A miserably pedantic and dirty composition, even worse than many in this collection. As a specimen of what vile stuff some of these are composed of, I give the first two lines of the Nāndī:

As far as I can make out the passage, he is of the same family as a Mâdhava who wrote commentaries on the Upanishads; but the MS. is much damaged, and consequently the passage is uncertain. Begins:

drâxexadravamelanâsâxi jagadraxaṇollâsaddîxam |

(10,690) Gr. ll. 20.

The text of the last four MSS. appears to agree closely with that of the Calcutta edition.

XLVI. मालतीमाधवम् Mâlatîmâdhava, by Bhavabhûti. Translated by Professor Wilson, "Select Specimens," vol. ii. The first act has been edited (1832) by Professor Lassen (Gild. 335), and the whole was printed at Calcutta, 8vo., 1830, and again reprinted in 1866. A critical edition, with Jagaddhara's C., was brought out by R. K. Bhandarkar, in 1876 (Bombay Series). The best S. Indian MSS. have the same text as that followed by Tripurârisûri in his C. Compared with that printed at Calcutta, 1866, there is not much difference as regards the passages in verse; the prose differs greatly; and it is therefore necessary to consider them as different recensions.

XLVII. मालविकाग्निमित्रम् Mâlavikâgnimitra, attributed to Kâlidâsa.[1] An English abstract is in Wilson's "Select Specimens," vol. ii. App. 3. Prof. Weber has also translated it into German (1856). The last edition, and by far the best, is in the Bombay Sanskrit Series, No. vi.[2] The S. Indian MSS. entirely agree with this carefully edited

[1] In Pandit Jîbânanda's edition, with Raṅganâtha's C. (Calc., 1878), the drama is ascribed to Daṇḍi, and has 10 aṅkas.

Dr. Hall ("Vāsavadattā," pref. p. 15 note, l. 5) prefers Bhāsaka, Rāmila, and Saumila.

This recension (which has two forms) is commented on by Kāṭavema, in his Kumāragirirājīya, and also in the (as yet unnoticed) Diṅmātradarçana. A Cashmere recension (4) also has been lately discovered. On the relation of the Gauḍa and N. Indian recensions, see Pischel, "De Kalidasi Çakuntalae recensionibus," 1870.

It has been also printed at Calcutta (1868), 12mo., and subsequently. The two recensions of this play have been discussed by Professor Max Müller (Jhb. f. w. Kr. 1846; März pp. 472—486). 6. Prākrit Poetry.

I. सप्तशतकम् Saptaçatakam, a collection of 700 erotic stanzas in Prākrit, by Sāla (Çāla, or Çālivāhana). Dr. Weber has edited, from a N. Indian MS., part of the Hālasaptaçataka (Abhandlungen für die Kunde des Morgenlandes, v. No. 3); but though the MSS. in this Collection begin much in the same way (except the two last mentioned), they differ entirely in arrangement (at least) from the rest of Dr. Weber's text. The first stanza agrees with the first of Dr. Weber's. The second is—raikelihia niasaṇakarajualaṇiruddhaṇaṇajualassa |

ruddassa taīaṇaāṇaṃ pavvai paricubbiaj jaai ‖
Ch. ratikelihṛitanivasanakarayugalaniruddhanayanayugalasya |
rudrasya tṛitīyanayanaṃ pārvatīparicumbitaṃ jayati ‖
Cf. Weber, Anhang 48, which agrees with this.
4, 3. taṇ ṇamaha jassa vacche lacchīmuhaṃ kothuhaṃmi sakkattaṃ | disai miaparihīṇaṃ sasibibbaṃ sūrabibbam iva ‖
Ch. taṃ namata yasya vaxasi laxmīmukhaṃ kaustubhe saṃkrāntaṃ | dṛiçyate mṛigaparihīnaṃ çaçibiṃbaṃ sūryabiṃbaṃ iva.
St. 4. dūmetti datti sokkam kuṇatti araiṃ rameatti | arairaibaddhavāṇaṃ ṇamo ṇamo aṇaggabāṇāṇaṃ ‖
Ch. pratāpayanti dadati saukhyaṃ kurvanti aratiṃ ramayante |
aratiratibāndhavebhyo namo namaḥ anaṅgabāṇebhyaḥ ‖
Cf. Weber, 201, which agrees with this.

The fifth stanza agrees with the third of Dr. Weber's text, but Sāla is substituted for Hāla. The sixth stanza is wanting in the Hālasaptaçatakam; the seventh agrees with the second, and after this there is no correspondence. However, as far as the imperfect text permits one to judge, nearly every verse occurs in Dr. Weber's text, but in different parts; the stanzas of the first çataka in this Collection chiefly occurring in the third çataka of the Hālasaptaçataka. They are, therefore, rather different recensions than distinct works.

The second çataka begins:
ma aṇaggino va dhāmnim. Sanskrit tr. l. 72.

The third çataka begins with a stanza which nearly agrees with No. 47 of Dr. Weber's text. Sanskrit tr. l. 86.

The fourth çataka begins: dūi tuma via kusalāka°. Sanskrit tr. l. 99.

The fifth çataka begins with verse 223 of Dr. Weber's text. Sanskrit tr. l. 113.

The sixth çataka begins: paṇamaha mānassa. Sanskrit tr. l. 128.

The seventh çataka begins with a stanza much like No. 84 of Dr. Weber's text. Sanskrit tr. l. 140.

(10,283) Te. ll. 150. Contains the text ll. 1—54, and then the Sanskrit interpretation to the end. Written about 1650. Worm-eaten in parts.

(10,284) Gr. ll. 124—180. Written about 1650. Contains the Sanskrit translation, with a few explanatory notes. A very correct MS., and in good preservation.

(10,285) Gr. ll. 42. The Prākrit text to ç. v. 3. Written about 1700, in a large clear hand. The last line broken.

(10,286) Gr. ll. 52—77. The Prākrit text from i. 50 to the end. Written about 1700. In excellent order, except 3 or 4 ll.

(10,511) a. Gr. ll. 124. Written about 1700. This explanation is here attributed to one Īçvara.

In the C. on stanza 5 (No. 10,284) a legend is given which may be the foundation of Dr. Bhau Dājī's statement quoted by Professor Weber, p. 2 (note): atra kilai 'vam anuçrūyate. Pratishṭhānanagarasthitena Sālavāhanena (sic) rājñā bhagavatī bhāraty upāsitā, sā ca prasannā bhūtvā varaṃ vṛiṇīshve 'ty ācacaxe. sa tac chrutvā bhagavati! madīyaskandhāvāre bhagavatyā sadā saṃnihitayā bhavitavyam iti provāca, bhagavaty api—rājan! devatānāṃ martyaloke sarvadā nivāso na yukta ity avādīt. Uktena rājñā tarhi saṃvatsaramātraṃ sthātavyam ity uktā bhāratī sārdhadivasadvayaṃ (l. 1*b*.) bhavadīyaskandhāvāre sthāsyāmī 'ty uktvā 'ntardadhe. Atha tatkaṭakavāsinaḥ çrībālagopālaṃ kartum upacakramire; tatra ca taiḥ kṛiteshu koṭimitānāṃ kādaṃbakaṃ āhṛitya sālaṅkārāṇāṃ gāthānāṃ sapta çatāni racitānī 'ty arthaḥ (5).

The above MSS. all agree.

(10,287) Gr. ll. 41. The beginning of a C. on a Prākṛit saptaçataka attributed to a Çālivāhana. Contains the first 102 stanzas. It is not the same recension as the last, nor does it agree with Dr. Weber's text, though many stanzas appear (as far as the initial words go) to be the same as the verses which occur in Dr. Weber's text. Though not the same as Kulanāthadeva's C., it is very nearly the same work, if one may judge by Professor Weber's quotations. After the benediction (which is broken off) this C. begins: atha çātavāhananarendro nirvighnagranthaparisamāptyartham ishṭadevatānamaskāram ādau badhnāti pasuvaṇa iti. Written about 1650. The first 5 ll. much injured.

(10,288) T. ll. 5. The Sanskrit translation only of Prākṛit stanzas much the same as those explained in No. 10,287, as far as stanza 104 much worm-eaten, and the last 3 ll. not inked. Written about 1620.

(10,289) Te. ll. 10. Last l. broken. A transcript of the last.

(10,283) Te. ll. 153. Sanskrit translation.

II. सेतुप्रबन्धः Setuprabandha, a poem on the history of Rāma, generally attributed to Kālidāsa. It has been fully described in "Verzeichniss," pp. 367 ffg. An edition, by Professor S. Goldschmidt, is in the press. A MS. (in the Telugu character) of the complete work is in the I. O. Library at London; it contains 16 āçvāsas.

(10,280) Gr. ll. 161. Text, with a brief C. (Vivaraṇa), by Çrīkṛishṇa. A few lacunæ. Written about 1700. In good preservation. About 4,800 stanzas.

(10,281) Te. ll. 208. Breaks off in Āçv. 16. Wants end. Many lacunæ. Written about 1650. Sanskrit explanation only.

(10,282) Gr. ll. 164—208. A carefully written fragment of the text (about 1700), but full of lacunæ, and much worm-eaten. Çrīkṛishṇa refers to previous commentators.

III. पिंगलच्छन्दः Piṅgalacchandas, a treatise on Prākṛit prosody, composed in Prākṛit. Begins:

jo vivihamattasāarapāraṃ patto vimaḷam aihelaṃ |
paṭhamaṃ bhāsataraṃṇo ṇāo so piṅgala (nāo) jayati ||
Sānsk. yo vividhamātrasāgarapāraṃ prāpto vimalam atihelaṃ |

The Sanskrit explanation is from No. 5,360.

(5,358) D. ff. 41. Written 1508 (?). Probably copied at the end of the last century from an older original. Carelessly written, but tolerably correct. About 800 granthas.

(5,359) D. ff. 13. A sort of abstract of Piṅgala's work, containing rules for different metres, and examples. Carelessly written. Recent.

a. "Piṅgalārthadīpa" (the name is nearly illegible), by Lakṣmīnātha, son of Rāyaṇṇabhaṭṭa.

(5,360) D. ff. 96. Written Çak. 1554 at Jūnarapura, which appears to be in the Mahraṭha country, as the final entry is partly in the Mahraṭha language. This MS. contains the first (or mātrāvritti-) paricchedа only; it is very correct, but a little worn in parts. In the introduction (st. 5–6) the author gives some account of his family.

Bhaṭṭaçrīrāmacandraḥ kavivibudhakule labdhadehaḥ çruto yaḥ
çrīmān *nārāyaṇā*khyaḥ kavimukuṭamaṇis tattanujo 'janishṭa | tatputro rāyabhaṭṭaḥ sakalakavikulakhyātakīrttis tadīyo

çrīrāyabhaṭṭatanayo laxmīnāthaḥ samullasatpratibhūḥ |
chandasi piṅgalabhaṇite tanute ṭīkām udāramatiḥ ‖ 6 ‖

He does not refer to previous commentators. At the end of the introduction he says: granthāraṃbhe granthakṛid abhimatasiddhaye chandaḥçāstrādhishṭhātṛipiṅgalanāgānusmaraṇalaxaṇamaṅgalam ācarati; whence it appears that he does not consider Piṅgala to be the author. This MS. contains about 1,700 granthas.

2. Commentaries on the Rāmāyaṇa.

1. कतकटीका Kataka-ṭīkā (Anonymous). The oldest known is the Kataka-ṭīkā; so called after the kataka or clearing-nut (of the "Strychnos potatorum"), for reasons given by the author (Introduction, v. 4), that "the ambrosia of the holy pool of the Rāmāyaṇa" had been made "muddy by the dust of unsuitable commentaries." It was not, therefore, the first commentary, but the later annotators all quote it as the earliest. It is very peremptory in rejecting interpolations,[1] and is, therefore, in one way very superior to most Indian commentaries, but it can hardly be termed a work of high merit in other respects. MSS. of it are not common, but there is nearly a complete copy here. The introduction begins:

çuklāmbaradharaṃ vishṇum etc.
agajānanapadmārkaṃ gajānanam aharniçaṃ |
anekadantaṃ bhaktānām ekadantam upāsmahe ||
vāgarthāv iva, etc.

[1] Muir's "Sanskrit Texts," iv. pp. 480–1. The grounds on which the author of the Kataka rejects verses, and even whole chapters (especially in the Uttarakāṇḍa), are: 1. That such do not occur in old MSS.; 2. That they contain statements inconsistent with the subject, or with what has been already said. The first of these constitutes the author's great merit; the latter is arbitrary, and the author's notions of what the poem should say are founded chiefly on astrological fancies, and similar modern ideas.

bho! bho! kim idam rāmāyaṇam? vyākhyeyam uta na? yadi prayojanam, vyākhyeyam; yadi no na. prayojam apy aihikam, āmushmikam vā syāt. na tāvat kṛishivāṇijyasevādinā dhanadhānyādivad aihikam kiṃcit prayojanam rāmāyaṇapāṭhāt paçyāmaḥ; nā 'py āmushmikam. After a good deal more to the same effect, and which is in very modern style, the real Commentary begins.

For a specimen I take the C. on the beginning of ch. 15 of the second (Ayodhyā-) kāṇḍa, according to the ordinary editions of the S. recension.

"atha rājastriyā rājñā ca guptahṛidayatayā pravarttamānasya sumantrasya yathāpūrva(ṃ) pravṛittiḥ | (çl. 1) "te" ityādi | 'ushya' ushitvā 'upasthānam' iti "kṛityalyuṭo bahulam" (P. iii. 3, 113) ity ārhārthe lyuṭ upasthānārham tam upatasthur ity arthaḥ | 6. "prāgvāhāḥ" ityādi 'nadyaḥ' iti çeshaḥ parvataghaṭṭanapādhinā ūrdhvapravāhayatpradeçavatyaḥ 'xīriṇaḥ' xīrapūrṇāḥ abhishekapuraskṛitim iti praxālitam iti yāvad rājaputrābhishecanam tatsādhanam ādāya samavetās (13) 'te' brāhmaṇādayo 'mahī(patim)apaçyanto' bruvan' | kim abruvann ity ataḥ (14) "ko nu" ityādi (15) 'sajjah' sajjaparikara iti yāvat | (16) 'prasthito hy aham' iti ānetum iti çeshaḥ | athā 'py aham vyāghaṭya praviçyā' "yushmatām" yushmākam vacanād rājñaḥ sukham pṛicchāmi | sarve sametya rājñaḥ sukham kaccid iti pṛicchantī 'ti vijñāpayāmī 'ty arthaḥ vyāghaṭyā 'pi vijñāpanahetuḥ (17) 'pūjyā' ityādy api ca yat (18) 'sampraty' udayasamaye sarvadhā 'buddhasya' prabuddhasyā 'py 'agamanam' bahir nirgamanābhāvakāraṇam tac ca pṛicchāmī 'ty uktvā 'antaḥpuradvāram jagāma purāṇavit' cirakālakathābhijñaç ciravṛiddha iti yāvat (19) 'asaktam' anirodham | 'tushṭā vā' iti vācyamānarītye 'ti çeshaḥ |

The above is a fair specimen of the Commentary, and will show that it is not often that it will assist in restoring the text. So much is generally unnoticed in it, that it is, perhaps, hardly safe to conclude by the above that the important çloka in this chapter (3) in which karkaṭa (the Zodiacal sign) is mentioned, was not recognized by the author. The style and character of the explanations conclusively show that this C. is not old; its date may be at the earliest the thirteenth or fourteenth century A.D. As the author does not mention his name, it is impossible to be certain about his native country, but the invocation (above) of Kālahastīça points to the S. Telugu country.

Beyond a fragment in the India Office Library, I am not aware of the existence of any other MSS. than those described now. These are:

(11,774) Gr. ll. 134. Bālak. (1).
(11,775) Gr. ll. 106. Do.
(11,776) Gr. ll. 107 to 367. Do. Do. 2–3 incomplete, 4 incomplete, and 5 incomplete, of which ll. 123, 171—177, 232, 246, 247, 252—259, 261, 263—295, 298, and 316—348 are missing. Begins with end of sarga 77 of Bālak.; breaks off with beginning of sarga 48 of Sundarak.
(11,777) Gr. ll. 114. Do. Do. Kishk. and Sundarak. to sarga 61. The commencement to Kishk. (4) is however wanting, and there are many lacunæ in the first sarga; breaks off at beginning of sarga 61 of Sundarak. (5).
(11,778) Te. ll. 55. Do. Do. Sundarak. (5), begins with end of sarga 27, and breaks off with end of sarga 68. Ends of several leaves broken.

(11,780) Gr. ll. 55. Do. Do. Uttarak. (7); begins in middle of first sarga; breaks off in sarga 110. Incomplete.
All these MSS. are far from correct.

The next oldest C. appears to be that called "Tīrtha," by one Maheçvara, but there is no copy of it here. The most commonly used commentary, and which has been printed at Bombay and elsewhere, is the

2. Tilaka, by a Rāma. It evidently copies closely the Kataṭīkā.

3. Vivekatilaka, a ṭīkā to the R., by Varadarāja. The author of this was a Tamil Brahman (he calls himself Coḷapaṇḍita), who lived, probably, about 1600 A.D. The beginning is:

II. महाभारतम् Mahābhārata. It has been usually supposed that the MSS. of the Mahābhārata belong, roughly speaking, to one recension, but this is not the case; the Grantha and Telugu MSS. in this Library present a distinct recension hitherto[1] unnoticed. It will be impossible to give more than general results here, owing to the enormous extent of all texts of the Mahābhārata, and also because I have not a complete copy of the new (or Southern) recension to refer to. The other most marked recension is that which prevails in N. India, and which appears to have been finally settled about the sixteenth century A.D. by Nīlakaṇṭha's commentary. All the MSS. of the Harivaṃça to which I have been able to refer, are so nearly alike, that it is pretty certain that this is a comparatively modern work, as has indeed been generally supposed. The Calcutta edition of it represents the current text very fairly. To give briefly the chief results of such superficial comparison of the two recensions of the Mahābhārata as I have been able hitherto to make, I shall separate the text into three parts according to the evidence in their favour: (1) the chief episodes; (2) the shorter, final books; and (3) the longer books, which are mostly at the beginning:—

1. The Episodes agree narrowly in all the MSS. As regards the Bhagavadgītā, the very complete commentary of Çaṅkarācārya, the text of which is supported even to the minutest details by subsequent glosses, amply proves that this famous poem is in exactly the same condition now[2] as it was in the seventh century A.D. There were commentaries before Çaṅkara's, but they are not now in existence.[3] Another well-known episode—the Nalopākhyāna—presents a few various readings in the Grantha MSS., but not one of these is of any importance. The Samudramanthana in the S. recension contains some verses which are not in the Nāgarī MSS.

2. The shorter final books. All the MSS. agree fairly well in these books (xvi., xvii., xviii.), though various readings are numerous. The differences in entire çlokas do not amount to more than five per cent., and these are generally omitted in the N. recension.

3. The longer books. These differ to as great an extent as the two chief recensions of the Rāmāyaṇa; they also often differ in the number of their chapters as follows:

	NĀGARĪ RECENSION.	GRANTHA RECENSION.
I. Ādiparvan	250	248
II. Sabhā—	111	120
III. Vana—	306	302
IV. Virāṭa—	77	77

The conventional division of the Mahābhārata into eighteen books is very unsatisfactory for critical purposes, as it prevents an easy separation of the several parts, and the S. Indian division into twenty-four is preferable. By this the Ādip. is divided into three (Ādip.=8 ch.; Āstīkap.=40 ch.; Sambhavap.=200 ch.), the Çalyap. into two (Çalyap.=56 ch.; Gadāp.=11 ch.), the Sauptikap. into three (Sauptikap.=9 ch.; Aihikap.=11 ch.; Viçokap. =8 ch.), and the Çāntip. into two (Rājadharma=172 ch.; Moxadharma=191 ch.). Other divisions can be traced.

The following will show the differences between the two recensions such as ordinarily occur. I have chosen a fairly average instance where the texts fairly agree; to show how interpolations occur in the Nāgarī text would need more space than I can give here.

Nāgarī. Adip. ch. xi. 1–7, with which the ch. ends:

Ruruḥ |

[1] I have already made public the following summary in my "Aindra Grammarians."

[2] Mr. C. P. Brown had a most careful collation made of Çaṅkarācārya's commentary with Lassen's text; if I recollect rightly, the result was a single v. l. of no importance! I am not able, at present, to refer to Mr. Brown's edition (in the Telugu character), which was published at Madras in 1852. This agrees with the results of my own collations.

[3] See the passage quoted by Aufrecht, "Catalogus," p. 3. Çaṅkarācārya gives 700 as the number of verses, which is actually the case. Bruce and Grasberger's "Nala" are eclectic compilations.

In general, the result of a collation of the two recensions of the Ādiparvan is, that the Nāgarī recension has about ten per cent. more çlokas than the S. recension; these çlokas generally form passages wanting in the last. Of the rest of the text, a considerable portion (numerous vv. ll. apart) is the same in both; the rest of the text presents çlokas found in the Dev. recension, but with many vv. ll., and in a totally different order. The short chapters agree generally in both recensions.

B.—PURAṆIC LITERATURE.

1. Purāṇas.

Eighteen Purāṇas are mentioned everywhere; but they are often by no means the same works, though under one name. The names are hinted at by a convenient memorial verse in the Devī Bhāgavata: Madvayaṃ (Matsya, Mārkaṇḍeya) bhadvayaṃ (Bhavishya, Bhāgavata) cai 'va bratrayaṃ (Brahma, Brahmāṇḍa, Brahmavaivarta) vacatushṭayam (Vishṇu, Vāmana, Vāyu, Varāha) | Anāpalingaṃ (Agni, Nārada, Padma, Liṅga) Kūrmaskaṃ (Kūrma, Skānda) purāṇāni pṛithak pṛithak || There are several other works termed purāṇa, but they are mostly of only local fame.

I. अग्निपुराणम् Agnipurāṇa. An edition has just been completed in the Bibliotheca Indica. The contents are most miscellaneous and unconnected, and include chapters on law, grammar, prosody, &c.

(1,565) D. ff. 397. Ends with the "Āgneyapurāṇamāhātmya." Agrees in the beginning with the work published in the Bibliotheca Indica. f. 175 is wanting, and the last 3 ff. have been recently supplied. The rest of the MS. is perhaps 150 years old, but not very correct. A transcript of this MS. has been used for the latter part of the Bibliotheca Indica edition.

(1,566) D. ff. 339.

(1,567) D. ff. 339. This contains the Uttarabhāga, which is the Kāvēri-Māhātmya; it has 300 chapters, and is spurious. A modern MS.

XII. ब्रह्मपुराणम् Brahmapurāṇa. See Wilson's "Vishṇu Purāṇa" (edited by Dr. Hall), vol. i. pp. xxvii—xxix; Aufrecht's "Catalogus," pp. 17–18. The following MSS. do not answer to the description as given in these works, but Wilson states that many different works pass current under this name. Besides questionable fragments, there are in this collection two distinct works, A and B.

A. (1,515) D. ff. 201. Wants the end. About 8,000 gr. Many marginal corrections. The first few chapters are as follows:

adhy. i. Śṛishṭikathana. adhy. ii. f. 5, Prishṭor (sic) janmamāhātmya. adhy. iii. Manūttarakīrtana, f. 16*b*. adhy. iv. Sūryavaṃça, f. 22*b*. adhy. v. Somavaṃçe vriddhaxatraprasūti, f. 31. adhy. vi. Yayāticarita, f. 34. adhy. vii. Yadorvaṃçakīrtana, f. 41. adhy. viii. Vṛishṇivaṃça, f. 45*b*. The chapters are not numbered; nor after the first few is even the subject mentioned. f. 101 is missing.

B. (1,516) D. ff. 1—63, and 104—153. 12 lines to a page. Much injured by damp, and quite illegible in many places. 103 adhyāyas. This differs entirely from the last MS., and begins with a Gautamīmāhātmya.

(1,797) D. ff. 30. Prayāgamāhatmya. 1,798 is another copy.
(1,916) D. ff. 154. Raṅganātha (Çrīraṅga) māhātmya, and three others, viz., of Veṅkaṭagiri, Kaḷahasti, and Hastigiri (Conjeveram). Many leaves injured, and ff. 46—150 missing.
(1,917) D. ff. 18. Kodaṇḍamandana. In praise of Rāma's skill in arms.
(1,971) D. ff. 52. Gautamīmāhātmya. Imperfect. Wants end.
(1,972) D. Do. Wants end.
(1,982) D. ff. 170. Lalitopākhyāna. 32 chapters. 9 lines to a page. About 3,000 gr. This is about ādiçakti.
(1,983, 1,985) Do. Two other copies.
(1,984) Do. A fragment (24 chapters only).
(11,314) Te. ll. 22. Çvetagirimāhātmya. 10 a.

XIII. ब्रह्मकैवर्तपुराणम् Brahmakaivartapurāṇa. The Brahmakaivarta is sometimes said to be a Purāṇa, but the fragments here are Māhātmyas, and are of the most questionable value.

(1,577) D. ff. 63. 12 lines to a page. About 2,500 gr. This treats of the merit of bathing in the Kāvēri at certain seasons. It is not therefore properly a Purāṇa. The special name on it is Tulākāverīmāhātmya.
(1,663) D. ff. 174. Bhāga 3. Kāçīmāhātmya, in 26 chapters.
(1,664) D. ff. 141. Pūrva (?) and Rahasya Bhāgas. Do. Ch. 32 and 7. About 3,150 gr.
(1,665) D. ff. 58. Bhāga 3.
(1,666) D. ff. 161. Parts 1 and 2. Recent. This is a spurious work to promote the worship of Çiva.
(1,667) D. ff. 74. Part i. Begins: naimishe nimishāxetre ṛishayaḥ çaunakādayaḥ | sūtaṃ dharmavidāṃ çreshṭham paripapracchur ādṛitāḥ ‖
(1,668) D. ff. 75—151. Rahasyabhāga (or Madhyamabhāga). Begins: bhāratam paramākhyānaṃ çrotavyaṃ svahitecchubhiḥ | yasya çravaṇamātrena mahāpāpāçvalāḥ khalu ‖
(1,669) D. ff. 101. Tṛitīyabhāga. An old MS. repaired. Begins: çrībhavānītanayādyatanayanandadāyaka | kāçīvāsijanāghangharim dhuṇḍhe namo 'stu te ‖
(1,670) D. ff. 113. Do.
(1,782) D. ff. 177. Pañcanadamāhātmya. Relates to Tiruvaiyār, near Tanjore, said to be a part of the Brahmakaivartapurāṇa.
(1,783) D. ff. 178. Do.
(1,784–5) are other copies. (1,786–7) are extracts.

XIV. ब्रह्मवैवर्तपुराणम् Brahmavaivartapurāṇa. See Wilson's "Vishṇupurāṇa" (by Hall), vol. i. pp. lxv–lxvi. A very full account is given by Aufrecht ("Catalogus," pp. 20—27).

Altogether this work is said to contain gr. 24,000. There is a note in this MS. that it was purchased at Benares. It was written Saṃv. 1843. It is not a real Purāṇa, but more like a Çaktitantra.

XV. ब्रह्माण्डपुराणम् Brahmāṇḍapurāṇa. It does not appear that this Purāṇa has ever been found as yet; an immense number of Māhātmyas and the like are said to form parts of it. See Wilson's "Vishṇupurāṇa" (by Hall), vol. i. p. lxxxv. What is commonly called the Vāyupurāṇa is sometimes (MSS. Nos. 1,612, etc.) said to be a part of it, and the book is said to exist in a Kavi version in the island of Bali.

Aufrecht ("Catalogus," pp. 57—61) gives a full analysis of this Purāṇa. His conclusion is: "Librum Purāṇæ nomen minime merere, sed in usum sectæ cujusdam, quæ generali Bhāgavatarum nomine sæpe nuncupatur, compilatum esse, libro perlecto, mihi quidem persuasum est."

3. Miscellaneous Puranic Works, Abridgments, etc.

शंकरविलासः Çaṅkaravilāsa, by Vidyāraṇyayati (i.e. Sāyaṇa). This enormous work is unfortunately incomplete as represented by the MSS. preserved in this Library. According to the account given of it in the introduction, the whole should consist of four paricchedas containing 15,000, 15,000, 8,000, and 10,000 granthas respectively. It begins:

This is an incorrect transcript, but is of some interest, as this tantra is rare. It is, however, only a small (?) part of the ceremonial division; the doctrinal part is entirely wanting. Of this, the only account I know is in the Çaṅkaradigvijaya, and similar books. This Vaishṇava system still obtains in S. India.

XXV. शिवरहस्यम् Çivarahasya, a huge tantra containing 100,000 granthas, full of Çaiva legends, which appear to be collected from various sources, but as this tantra is mentioned in Sāyaṇa's Çaṅkaravilāsa, it must be earlier, at least, than 1300 A.D. Begins:

māheçvare purā sattre pravṛitte munayas tadā | yadṛicchayā 'gataṃ sūtaṃ paippalādaṃ hi sattriṇaḥ ‖
vājaçravasa āhus taṃ samavetā maharshayaḥ | etc.

They ask for a recital of what Devī told Skanda, which is told them. This tantra asserts that he who even thinks that Vishṇu is equal to Çiva will go to hell!
